Victims of Persecution in Continental Europe Taking Refuge in Great Britain —Their Damani ... Effect on the Working Classes. : : OREGON.

The immigration of foreign working men and women into England in past times has been of the very highest service to the economical and social progress of the country. Silk manufacture, so important a branch of the national industry, is only one of the many pursuits that have been established by the statement of the s lished by aliens, who by religious or political persecution had been forced to leave their own country and follow their own industrial pursuits in England. TRANSACTS A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS Practically the descendants of these immigrants have become English, and their origin is lost sight of, for in a large number of cases they have Angli-cized their names; the Le Roys have become Kings, the Boulangers Bakers, and so on. Immigration of this kind was most valuable to the persecuted individuals who were forced into exile, and to the country which received them and benefited by their knowledge, thrift and industry. But the London Queen says there is another kind of immigration which possesses none of these advantages, and this is going on to an injurious extent at the present timethat of the paupers from the eastern countries of Europe, who have no special knowledge, and, therefore, on arriving in this country, have to com-

NESTING IN A TRAP. Two Rats That Knew How to Make the Best of Things.

A gentleman at the north end of Hartford, Conn. had been annoyed by a huge rat which persisted in making way with chicken feed and pretty much everything else that it found in the barn loft, where a few hens were struggling to reproduce themselves in the shape of chickens. One of the newfangled French rat traps that have attracted so much attention about town had been baited with a choice piece of roasted cheese to tempt the trespasser, says the Courant, but the old fellow was too "fly," and so an old-fashioned steel trap was buried under the chaff in the well-worn path from under the hay, the wire being pushed aside meanwhile. The old rat tumbled into the hidden trap and was caught. Nothing was thought of the wire cage (which lay half concealed by a lock of hay) until one night recently, when it was moved out of the way. A mass of stuff in the center of the cage attracted attention, and upon examination it was found given up trying to escape and had set-tled down to make the best of the situspaces at least two quarts of chaff and bits of hay, and had constructed a com-Close connection made in Chicago with all trains floing East and South.

The flume which conveys the water from the mountains to the reservoir at San Diego, Cal., is said by those who know whereof they speak to be the largest and longest thing of the kind in the world. AN INTERESTING QUESTION. When Did Ladies Begin to Ride Sideways

In a book entitled "Remains Concerning Bristain," published in 1614, it is stated that Queen Anne, wife of Richard IL, first taught English women to ride on side saddles, when heretofore they rode astride. As late as 1772 Queen Mariana Victoria, of Portugal, always rode astride. There has been some discussion as to whether this ancient practice should not be revived, and the side saddle abandoned, says the Rider and Driver. In May, 1890, a lady, wife of an English baronet, appeared in Rotten Row attended by her groom and mounted crosslegged. Her riding habit was not only somewhat longer than the new fashion enjoins, but longer than the old one as well, and was simply a very voluminous divided skirt. The fashion, however, does not appear yet to make much way, although it is known that it is not so uncommon for ladies to ride cross saddle as might be supposed. A curious side saddle is couple of half-grown rats had found their way into it, had evidently used by women in Iceland. It has a sent with a back like a common chair, and has, instead of a stirrup, ation. They had drawn in through the a little shelf on which both the feet can
