The second congressional district needs a bimetalist in congress. No others need apply.

SENATOR JOHN SHERMAN is stuck on Cleveland. The old man in reality admires his ability to force gold-bug legislation, not the president.

AT KINGSTON, Ind., a passenger train crashed into a freight, killing twelve and maiming many more. A brakeman is responsible for the accident.

SOLLY SMITH and Gen. Dixon fought last night for the feather-weight championship before the Coney Island club. Dixon was the favorite a few days ago.

The Oregonian printed in full the gold-bug speech of Senator Duffell, composed of worn-out, thread-bare ideas, but fails to give Senator Mitchell's recent speech.

The jury in the case, State of Indiana vs. Alvin Williams, charged with the killing of Alvin Williams at a democratic rally last week, could not agree at the trial last week. This is a noted case, and received much publicity through the press.

The Oregonian in Sunday's paper has quite a sensational article on "border outlaws" in Eastern Oregon. It is an overdrawn article, and more sensational than true. The valley counties produce more "cultus," petty larceny thieves and burglars than Eastern Oregon. The desperadoes of this section are principally imaginary.

The chop on the great and much-abused McKinley tariff is not going to be so general as the hungry democrats made us believe earlier in the season. Every one of the boys has got a little snap of his own, or in his locality that he wants protected, and when the committee on ways and means get through with the suggestions it will naturally conclude that the democratic party is not such a free trade party after all.

Ellis, our congressman, deserves to be renominated for the second term. He will hardly have an opportunity up to the close of his first term to show what he can do. So far, he has served his constituents conscientiously. His opposition to the unconditional repeal of the Sherman act and vote for free coinage show him to be an unwavering friend to the masses. Wipe out the present silver legislation from our statute books, giving no other, and the debtors of our land are doomed. What we have we should keep till the gold-bugs come to the center. The Gazette is an Ellis paper, yes, even till hades gets to be an ice pond.

It has been suggested that the farmers here charter a ship and make their own shipments of wheat. Sales are going to be slow at best, and in this way can get fully 75 per cent. as an advance on their loss, and in six months will realize on the entire cargo. It is estimated that it will take 100,000 bushels to make a ship load. The plan is worth looking into, as it will save the profits of middlemen, and is about the only way that many of our farmers will realize very soon on this year's crop.

An enterprising drummer calculated that 20,000 people went from the Northwest to the World's Fair, spending, on an average, $300 apiece. This sums up $6,000,000. Right now this money would do wonders in the channels of business up here. Many a man is taking in the World's Fair who owes money he ought to pay.

Summer Weakness. And that tired feeling, loss of appetite and nervous prostration are driven away by Hood's sarsaparilla, like mist before the morning sun. THE OLD PARTIES. Written for the Gazette. Your correspondent is not in the habit of rambling off into the gloomy labyrinths of politics for the benefit of the reading public, but it seems that none should shirk the responsibility of contributing suggestions for the relief of the people, in these times of financial depression and discontentment.

The above idea may be readily conceived by anyone who will quietly and meditatively listen to the anarchical expressions so commonly indulged in by the people who have hitherto been the very backbone of society, and the stay of our country. But can we wonder at the tendency, when we take into account that so many of our men, whom the people have confided in and have placed in positions of trust and honor, have so ruthlessly neglected the interests of all but the one big I A casual glance at the intrigues of legislation is all that is needed to convince any thoughtful person that the interests of the common people cut no figure in the game, but the all-predominating I, looms up in such portentous proportions as to suggest having been many times magnified. Will some friend kindly tell the readers of your paper wherein the common people were benefited in the last by the fourteen days' debate on the silver question in the halls of congress. Well, I don't think you can, but it is plainly apparent that it cost the people many hundreds of dollars, and that most of the money finds lodgment in the pockets of the men we have honored with our trusts. It is true that silver was the common people's money but its chances have gone by the board and at the expense of the people. While I fail to see wherein the threatened issuing of fifty or one hundred millions of bonds will prove a benefit to the masses, it is easy to see wherein the bond-holder will increase his power to "couch" the people.

It was said just after the revolution in the English parliament that if ever England conquered America, "she must do it by some other means than the sword," and since then they have steadily persisted in endeavoring to frustrate our finance and have used other means, if possible less honorable, such as the attempt to smuggle Mason and Sillwell from the Southern confederacy and the shipping of her powder element into American soil. Yet our representatives legislate favorably to these haters of free institutions so as to suggest the idea that they have been bought.

Democracy want another executive dog to do the barking and stand guard over the halls of congress? Then let them select a young pup that may be easily trained to bark for the interests of the people, but it would be more prudent for her to hide her blushing face in Timé's waist until she has clothed her nakedness with the clothes of oblivion. But republicanisms are done but little better since she gained the great object of her existence. She has squandered our public domains, powdered to the demands of monopoly and stood in high places and watched the anarchical elements flock to our shores from every clime. They land in the East, in the South, in the West and cross us British Isles.

Now it remains for all those who would wish to avoid the most extensive results, to rise en masse and lay aside all party fealty and seek out all good planks which may now be in use, or may have been discarded by either of the parties and place them together along with such others as may be demanded by advancing civilization and nail them down by our votes into one platform for the people.

Then it may be truly said, "a government with broad acres, and equally broad ideas." I do not believe that electoral voting should be tolerated for a moment, but the voice of the people be heard direct that we may avoid the purchase of electoral votes by unprincipled and designing men who have an axe to grind. Perhaps, discarding the means of voting will aid us in employing means that will grind our axes and otherwise do our bidding and look to the general good of their employers.

I have already written more than I intended, but if it does not find lodgment in your waste-basket I may at some future time advance and argue a scheme for getting rid of the discordant elements which are so lavishly sowing the seeds of destruction on American soil.
