The dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy, and turnishes knowledge which no one hundred other volumes of the choicest books could supply. Young and old, educated and ignorant, the hand poor, should have it within reach, and refer to its contents every day in the year.

As some bave asked if this is really the Original Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, we are able to state we have learned direct from the publishers the fact, that this is the very work complete on which about forty of the best years of the author's life were so well employed in writing. It contains the entire vocabulary of about 100,000 words, including the correct spelling, derivation and definition of same, and is bound in cloth half morocco and sheep.

PRIZES ON PATENTS.

How to Get Twenty-five Hundred Dollars for Nothing.

The Winner has a clear Cift of a Small Fortune, and the Losers Have Patents that may Bring them in Still More.

Would you like to make twenty-five hundred tollars? If you would, read carefully what collows and you may see a way to do it. The Press Claims Company devotes much attention to patents. It has handled thousands of applications for inventions, but it would like to handle thousands more. There is plent; of inventive tallent at large in this country practical results. That encouragement the Pres laims Company propose to give.

NOT SO HARD AS IT SEEMS

A patent strikes most people as an appalling ly formidable thing. The idea is that an in ventor must be a natural genium like Edison o must spend a fortune on delicate experiments before he can get a new device to a patentable degree of perfection. This delusion the com-pany desires to dispel. It desires to get into fore it is of great importance that ap the head of the public a clear comprehension of the fact that it is not the great, complex, and expensive inventions that bring the best returns to their authors, but the little, simple, and somewhat ashamed of bringing them to the attention of the Patent Office.

NO BLANKS IN THIS COMPETION. This is a competition of rather an unusal nature. It is common to offer prizes for the best story, or picture, or architectural plan, all the competitors risking the loss of their labor and the successful one merely selling his for the amoun of the prize. But the Press Claims Company's offer is something entirely differ ent. Each person is asked merely to help him-self, and the one who helps him self to the best advantage is to be rewarded by doing it The prize is only a stimulus to do something that would be well worth doing without it architect whose competitive plan for club house on a certain corner is not occept ed has spent his labor on something of very attieuse to him. Watches in Card Cases.

Among the latest novelties in the way of card cases is a very dainty little one made of very finely dressed leather. In one corner of the case is set a ting little watch. The effect of this is verpretty, and, besides this, the combina tion is a very useful one. Ladies are often put to agreat deal of trouble in taking out their watches when on the street Carrying this little time-piece set in their card case or pocket-book saves them all this trouble, and then, too, when making calls they have a little reminder in their hands that they must not overstay their welcome. Watches set in this way in card cases and pocket-books are much more popular than the bracelet watch attachment. The novelty was imported from Paris. but is now being manufactured very largely in this country. The cost of these card cases and pocket-books is from seven dollars and fifty cents up.-N. Y. His preparations, however, had consumed more time than he realized, and before the pail was half full he was astonished to hear the whistle of the first morning express, which it was his most important duty to meet. He dropped the pail, ran to the house, exchanged his wife's bonnet for his red and blue cap of office, and with flying skirts hurried to the station platform. The sight of an individual with a full beard and flowing skirts and a station master's cap dazed everybody on the train, and gave the porters at the sta-tion the idea that Marchand had gone erazy. A policeman was summoned, and the station master was marched off to jail.

To the railway authorities, who began an investigation of his conduct Marchand explained the responsibility of the obstreperous goat for his un precedented performance. He was punished by temporary removal from Idelizing Notorious Women a Fault of Reporters. When a woman becomes involved in any escapade that renders her suddenly notorious she is invariably referred to as beautiful, and generally a description more or less fanciful of her various charms is given. This enterprise on the part of correspondents, says the Chicago Herald, is entirely unnecessary, because it is not always the handsome woman who proves most attractive to the opposite sex or is sigable of doing the most mischief in the world. This truth is well illustrated in the case of Mrs. Hetherington. She was variously described as "ravishingly beautiful," as having a "doll face with a baby's complexion," and as vainly conscious of her own charms. She passed through Chicago the other day, and a truthful reporter of the Herald describes her as plain. She is short and slightly built and has a sallow complexion and dark rings around the eyes. Perhaps such a description accords with the popular notions of beauty in Japan, that land of sallow complexions and little women, but we have different ideas here.

The Pate of the Buffalo.

Twenty years ago there roamed over the plains and mountains of the far West nearly 8,000,000 buffaloes. To-day here are less than 500 head of the animals n existence. There are but eighty-five head of wild buffaloes, 304 alive in capivity, and about 300 under the protecion of the Government in Yellowstone Park. There is also said to be about 550 head in the British possessions, north of Montana, but this is rumor Of the eighty-five head of wild buffaloes which are known to exist, twenty-five are in Texas, twenty in Colorado, twenty-six in Wyoming, ten in Mon-tana and four in Dakota. The statistics lave been carefully gathered by the officials of the Smithsonian Institution, and it is absolutely known that the number stated comprise all the wild buffaloes of the world. WOULDN'T WASTE CHANCES. One Woman Who Was Not Averse to

Did you ever notice how a party of women, young or old, will discuss every conceivable subject, but never fail to end with an animated dissertation on the marriage question? asks a writer in Womankind; and then she adds: I happened, not long since, to stray into a party of fair babblers. Fair, did I say?
—well, all save one. She was the most ill-favored, unlovely girl I have seen in many a day. Her complexion was pretty, but was marred by a head of luminous hair, freckles to match, and pale blue eyes. A total lack of eyebrows, in connection with large and prominent teeth, excluded all hope of facial beauty, even in future years. As the conversation rolled on from topic to topic the great subject of marriage was finally broached. I will not at-tempt to tell you how each individual gave her profound views on the subject; how the majority asserted that they knew marriage was a failure, that Minerva herself had thought best to remain an old maid, etc., numerous other eases being cited to hold up their end of the argument. At last there was a lull. The fair disputants were evident ly collecting their thoughts for a fresh onslaught, when our graceless maid threw down a book she had been perus ing through the thickest of the battle, rumpled up her locks till each particular hair seemed to assume a perpendic

SOUND PHILOSOPHY.

How to Make Married Life an Existence of Peace and Happiness. The first year of married life is a most important era in the history of man and wife. Generally, as it is spent. so is almost all subsequent existence. The wife and the husband then assimilate their views and their desires, or else, conjuring up their dislikes, they add fuel to their prejudices and animosities forever afterwards. "I have somewhere read," says Rev. Mr. Wise, in his Bridal Greetings, "of a bridegroom who gloried in his eccenricities. He requested his bride to acompany him into the garden a day or wo after their wedding. He then drew aline over the roof of their cottage. siving his wife one end of it he retreated to the other side, and ex-

"Pull the line!" "She pulled it at his request, so far as she could. He cried:

" 'Pull it over!"

" 'I can't,' she replied. "But pull with all your might! stril shouted the whimsical husband. "But vain were all the efforts of the bride to pull over the line so long as her husband held the opposite end. But when he came round, and they pulled at the same end, it came over with great "'There!' as the line fell from the roof, 'you see how hard and ineffectual was our labor when we both pulled in opposition to each other; but how easy and pleasant it was when we both pulled together! It will be so with us through

In this illustration, howely as it may be, there is a sound philosophy. Hus band and wife must mutually bear and concede if they wish to make home a retreat of joy and bliss. One alone can not make home happy. There needs unison of action, sweetness of spirit and great forhearance and love in both husband and wife to secure the great end of happiness in the domestic circle Home is no unmixed paradise of sweets: the elements of peace and true happi ness are there, and so, too, are the ele-ments of discord and misery; and it without to make it a pandemonium, or the loving genius of harmony to make it the prompter of every affectionate impulse.
