AFRICAN HAIR-DRESSING.

t Is Often Very Elaborate, Involving Much Time in the Work. A limited wardrobe, such as befits the climate, may in a brief manner be stated as the general characteristic of African dress, says Peoples of the World. What little they wear is, how-ever, in many cases peculiar enough to merit a few words, and is sometimes combined with an extraordinary furor some countenances. Among the Man-ganjas, for example, it is the head upon with the use of type-writers in all departments of commercial and professional work.

He which the greatest elaboration is bestowed. The most favorite form of dressing the hair is to take a couple of pieces of wet, pliable hide, and shape them into the form of ox or buffale horns, after which they are allowed to dry. They are then fastened to each side of the forehead and the hair trained horns are the favorite ornament, but sometimes only one is used: in the latter case the wearer looks like a black bi pedal unicorn.

Others vary this style of hair-dressing by twisting up a number of locks all over the head into the shape of miniature horns, so as to cause a porcupine like appearance in the practicer of this extraordinary style of head dress. Pigtails, so far as their short "wool" will allow, are also in vogue among some of this tribe. The women, as might be expeeted, are also by no means without fastidiousness in dressing and ornamenting their hair, but this is quite over shadowed by another effort at beautifying in which they excel, namely, in wearing the "pelele" or ring of ivory, metal, or bambso, which is of considerable size, in their upper lip, the orifice for its reception being gradually enparged from early girlhood until it can receive the full-sized ring, which, amon and remlers it impossible for the women to pronounce the inbial letters. Hence a woman in this tribe speaks differently from the men. Some of the women even tattoo, but owing to the darkness of their skin this mode of decoration cannot got shown to advantage and is not very popular. Us not pleasant to record of a nation so fond of dress that they seemed to be entirely unconscious that in civilized eyes cleanliness is a virtue which canics even higher than tat tooing.
