Some of our readers were at first inclined to think that the Gazette's pencil pusher was the author of that correspondence in Tuesday's issue which created so much turmoil in our little city. Again we beg to suggest to our many friends and readers that we are not of that make up. If we feel the necessity of making any comments on any subject, it would be done "open and above board," and not under a nom de plume. In fact we have always opposed this kind of agitation, for without a personal signature no great good is going to be accomplished. So in the future when any article ampears over a signature, do us the justice to say that signature, do us the justice to say that it is not of our authorship.
