The Original Webster's Unabridged DICTIONARY

By SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE publishers, we are able to obtain a number of the above book, and propose to furnish a copy to each of our subscribers.

The dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It alls a vacancy, and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred other volumes of the choicest books could supply. Young and old, educated and ignorant, rich and port, should have it within reach, and refer to its contenis every day in the year.

As some have asked if this is really the Origina Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, we are able to state we have learned direct from the publishers the fact, that this is the very work complete on which about forty of the best years of the author's life were so well employed in writing. It contains the entire vocabulary of about 100,000 words, including the correct spelling, derivation and definition of same, and is the regular standard size, containing about 300,000 square inches of printed surface, and is bound in cloth half morocco and skeep.

It is common to offer prizes for the best story, or picture, or architectural plan, all the competitors risking the loss of their labor and the successful one merely seiling his for the amoun of the prize. But the Press Claims-Company's offer is something entirely different. Each person is asked merely to help him-self, and the one who helps him self to the est advantage is to be rewarded by doing it. The prize is only a stimulus to do something that would be well worth doing without it. The architect whose competitive plan for a club house on a certain curner is not occup-ed has spont his labor on something of very attle use to him. But the person who patents a attle use to him. The owner of the vessel was even more delighted than his guests. Four o'clock came and the vessel was miles from the hotel. The cooks began to get anxious. They were assured it was all right. After an hour or two a capital supper was served, and Mary Ann and James forgot all about their duties on shore. When their host said: "I wonder what the people at the hotel are eating" there was a great shout of laughter. All consented to the mutiny against their employer, and didn't mind sailing until ten or eleven o'clock, when the schooner finally landed. In the meantime the guests were in a fine state of

THE MONROE DOCTRINE

Declaration Opposing Foreign Interference with Cisatiantie Affairs.

Briefly and broadly stated, the Monroe doctrine is our national policy of powers with the political affairs of established popular governments in the American hemisphere. Its origin, as related by the New York Times, was as follows: In 1822, at a congress of European powers at Verona, Italy, there was discussed a project for along spain to recover her sway over her revolted American colonies. This aroused strong indignation in the United States and the sentiment: "America for the Americans," became a popular cry. In the fallowing year 1823—President the fellowing year-1823-President Monroe, after careful consultation with his secretary of state, John Quincy Adams, and with Thomas Jefferson, incorporated in his annual message the following declarations: "That we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety;" and "that we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing (independent American governments) or controlling in any manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than ropean power in any other light than as a manifestation of an unfriendly dis-position toward the United States." These declarations at once became known as the Monroe doctrine. They received popular approval at the time and have always been advocated since then. During the late civil war Louis Napoleon, in contempt of the doctrine, sought to establish Archduke Maximilian as titular emperor of Mexico. Owing to the occupation of the national forces at home the effort then met with only a diplomatic protest, but in ordinary times such a measure would rouse the country to active opposition. In international affairs of to-day the doctrine has its appplication in the way of deropean intrigues or armed interference with independent Ameri-

PORTUGAL IN HARD STRAITS. Obliged to Repudiate Part of the Interest

on Her Debt. The speech with which the king of Portugal lately opened the cortes at Lasbon is scarcely calculated to convey any assurance as to the stability of the present cabinet, or even of the throne, says the New York Tribune. No nation can be regarded as politically safe which is unable to pay its way, and that is the situation in which Portugal is now placed. The king declared that, notwithstanding the reduction of government expenses and the savings efthe national revenue is now required to pay the interest on the debt. Matters have at length reached a crisis, and last Matters summer a decree was assued temporarily reducing the interest of the debt to onethird of the original amount. This was a step which partook of the nature of repudiation, and called forth strong protests from several of the foreign governments on behalf of those of their "I've been thinking that it would do subjects who had invested their money "Oh, that would be too great a fa-to make any further attempt to borrow money abroad.
