SOLID FACTS.

Justus, Bateman & Co., of Philain have nut in the possession of should it become a law. It consists of numerous pertinent questions and answers relative to the sheep and wool business, closing with a recapitulation as

"In reality, the Rocky Mountain region is better adapted for the sheep and wool growing industy than any other, therefore it is extensively engaged in. The was the cause of us being able to compete with foreign and natural stockraising countries. The expense of raising wool in this country is so much greater, transportation by land being so much more costly than that by water. Labor is so much higher and so much more of it is required here, while in Australia sheep are turned loose in large bands of 10,000 head on land rented by the owner at a small cost and which needs little or no attendance whatever except at shearing time. We in the Rocky Mountain region and in this district, where we can run only 1500 to 2000 head in a flock and require on an average of one man to each 400 or 500 hend of sheep to attend to their wants all the year 'round, cannot compete with such natural stock-raising countries Such close attention to our flocks in this region is necessary to ward off th constant attack of the numerous wild animals which infest this part of the country and continually prey upon our tlocks, and while we have to prepare feed for three months' winter at a great expense the sheep in Australia can roam at free will and fatten on the righ natural grass which clothe the pasture lands of that country in the winter time.

"After disposing of their sheep, two prominent sheepmen left this section the first of this month, their destination being South Africa. If they find conditions in that country favorable for wool growing quite a number of sheepmen in this immediate vicinity will sell out in the spring and emigrate.

LOFTY ATLANTIC WAVES. Heavy Ocean Waters That Swept Over

Steamer's Crow's Nest. The New York daily papers all re-corded the facts that the steamship

Majestic, on her eastern trip, caught a sea that demolished her crow's-nest lookout, and that the Teutonic, which caught the same gale coming west, had one sea which combed over the crow's nest and carried away her forward port lifeboat as it went over the rail. none of the daily papers took the trouble to mention just how the crow's nest on these ships is situated, and consequently how high that sea was. Inquiry by a Marine Journal repre sentative discovered that while in menof-war and many other ships the cus tom is to have the crow's nest in the foretop or a trifle above, the White Star ships have it at an altitude of twenty five feet above the main deck on the foremast, reached by an iron ladder from the forward hurricane deck. In such a ship as the Majestic or Teutonic the height of the main deck at the fore No internal medicine required, Cures rigging is about forty feet above the tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the level of the sea, which would make the height of the wave that carried away the crow's nest in this instance about seventy feet. This is a pretty big roller for the north Atlantic, but in other parts of the ocean such waves are often encountered in a storm. Supposing the ship to have been in the trough of the sea at the time this wave swept her the mean height of the wave might be calculated as not greater than forty feet, but it was certainly a body of water nearly seventy feet high from where the ship floated
