We were that several of the towns that were candidates for the location of the Eastern Oregon branch asylum are now questioning the advisability of the construction of the same. This looks to us very much like jealousy. They didn't talk that way before the site was selected and should not since they were defeated. Though Heppner is among the unsuccessful, yet she hastens to congratulate Union for capturing the much coveted plum, and hopes soon to hear of active steps being taken towards purchasing the site and constructing the building.

Dolph and Mitchell in the senate, and Hermann and Ellis in the lower house, will voice the sentiment of Oregon against the Wilson bill, and next June the people will emphasize its support of the doctrine of protection by a rousing majority for the republican ticket. Every day adds strength to the old party in Oregon.—The Dalles Times-Mountaineer.

The Salem Statesman says it is a fact. The woolgrowers up in Eastern Oregon are still voting their sheep—and they will not cease so long as the democratic party tries to give free wool to the manufacturers and yet keep up a high tariff on the clothes with which the wool-grower must hide his nakedness.

J. H. Stanley, the Washington county school superintendent, is spoken of as the possible candidate on the republican ticket for state superintendent of public instruction. Prof. Stanley was formerly principal of the Heppner public school.—La Grande Chronicle.

Until the Arlington Record came into existence, W. R. Ellis was known far and near as a man without a blemish on paper whose relatives failed to "get there" to find fault. It was ever thus, but the efforts fall short.

The Wilson bill has passed the house, income tax and all. The fight will be waged in the senate to the finish and some day the bill will be defeated.

Hon. F. P. Mays, of The Dalles, is favorably mentioned for the office of attorney general. He would fill that office admirably.

The silver question will come up again in congress ere the session ends, but we fear that no relief will be given.

Hon. Chas. Fulton, of Astoria is talked of for governor. Mighty good timber for that office.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

The examinations for the month of Jan. have begun. It takes about one week to complete them.

The contestants for the contest which will take place Feb. 24 are getting down to earnest work as the time draws nigh.

The foot-ball team gets a challenge from the Multnomah Seniors, but it has not been decided when they will play.

The O. A. C. team played the Multnomah Juniors Jan. 20th. The score was 5 to 0 in favor of the O. A. C.

The judges for the contest between the Clermont and Websterian societies are Prof. B. J. Hawthorn, of the State University, Prof. P. A. Gotz, State Normal School, Prof. S. E. Yerix, Willamette university. The judges will have difficulty in deciding between the contestants, as it is so close.

The castings for the new engine have arrived and now the work will begin. This work is for the fourth year mechanical class. They will have considerable work if they get it completed by the end of school, as all the castings are rough and have to be dressed and smoothed.

The lecture delivered Sunday, Jan. 29th, by Senator Huston was well attended, the college chapel being well filled. The Senator took for a subject his travels starting from Portland, Oregon, and visiting some of the cities such as Washington, Boston and last Chicago.

A PREHISTORIC MONARCH

Valuable Archaeological Discovery in Arizona.

The Curious Contents of an Ancient Tomb Which Was Discovered by Workmen in Excavating for a Large Building.

While removing the earth for the foundation of a new hotel to be erected at Crittenden, Ariz., the diggers discovered what seems to be the tomb of a king, though of what people it would doubtless puzzle an antiquarian to say.

The workmen had penetrated at some eight feet below the surface of the ground what they took to be a stone of a soft, friable nature, but which was evidently masonry of very superior workmanship when they reached the tomb itself. This was composed of large square blocks of stone, which was identified as red or rose granite, and cemented together with such skill as to first cause the whole, measuring twelve by fifteen feet, to appear as a solid mass. The opening of this, while very difficult, as the use of powder was prohibited by the archaeologists placed in charge of the excavation by the authorities, was accomplished by night, when the interest and curiosity of the party was so great that the work was continued by lamplight till dawn.

The tomb when opened, said the Philadelphia Times, was found to contain a gigantic image of a man lying at full length and made of clay mixed with a sort of preparation which gives it a bright blue color and a slight elasticity, the whole appearing to have been subjected to great heat. The image represented the naked figure, except for a very tight girdle about the waist, a pair of close-fitting sandals and a crown on the head shaped very much like a bishop's mitre but topped with the head of a hawk or eagle. The features are roughly modeled, are of an imperious cast, and the eyes are set deep in the sockets with a prominence so low as to preclude all idea that the original could have been an Indian. The hands, which are as small as a woman's, and bear on the backs the head of the bird, as on the crown, are crossed on the breast and hold an image about three inches long, of a squatting figure, probably that of a god. The feet are also crossed, the right presenting the peculiarity of possessing a sixth toe, which the sandal is cut to bring into prominence, as if the owner had prided himself on it. The hair of the image is dressed in thick curls on both sides of the head, reaching to the shoulders, and brought down to the brows over the forehead.

Careful examination of this clay figure revealed that it was merely the elaborate coffin of the real body and could be opened from the back. This was done with all possible care so as not to disturb the remains within, but a few handfuls of dust, dark brown and almost impalpable powder, is all that was left of the body. The dust, however, together with the girdle, the image of the god, and a large battle-axe with a blade of sharp glass or obsidian, and a handful of petrified wood were found in the coffin.

The crown is of thick red gold, carved with minute but well executed drawings, representing battle scenes, triumphal marches, and other pictures the meaning of which is somewhat misty, but in all the principal figures is that of a man with six toes on his right foot. The workmanship of the whole crown is very fine, and the bird's head on the top is a masterpiece worthy of Gallini. It holds in its mouth a magnificent Chalchicuitl, or green diamond, valued by the Aztecs, which shows some attempts at lapidification.

The figure is composed of plates of gold arranged in a series of small, very thin, so as to give with every movement of the wearer's body. On each of these plates, which is in shape a half ellipse, is engraved a figure or ideograph, conveying, however, no hint of their meaning in their form. The image of what is, presumably, a god is made of clay combined with the gold, and is of a reddish color, and is set in a girdle of gold. It represents a man, being seated upon a pedestal in a squatting posture, its eyes squinting, and grinning in hideous rictus, while both hands are placed over the ears, as if to shut out sound.

A peculiar thing about this image is that its hair is represented as hanging down its back in one long plait like a Chinaman's. The figure is hollow, but contained only half a dozen small black pebbles, highly polished, and a somewhat larger stone of a dull gray hue. The codin and these relics are now on exhibition, and are to be donated to the State Museum of History and Archaeology at Tucson. No clue of any value as to what race the remains are to be ascribed can be found, but it is probable that it was one antedating the Aztecs and even the mound-builders, and superior to both in knowledge of masonry, sculpture and the working of metals.

Metamorphosing a Skeleton.

The Lowell (Mass.) Courier tells an amusing story to the effect that a number of Boston men, learning of an adult man skeleton in Australia who weighed but 84 pounds, combined in a speculation to bring him to this country, and put him on shipboard for England. Sea air, change of food, etc., began to fatten him, and when he arrived in London he weighed 154 pounds.

PATENTS!

NOTICE TO INVENTORS.

There was never a time in the history of our country when the demand for inventions and improvements in the arts and sciences generally was so great as now. The convenience of mankind in the factory and workshop, the household and on the farm, as well as in official life, require continual accessions to the apparatus and implements of each in order to save labor, time and expense.

The political change in the administration government does not affect the progress of the American inventor, who being on the alert, and ready to perceive the existing deficiencies, does not permit the affairs of government to deter him from quickly conceiving the remedy to overcome existing discrepancies. Too great care cannot be exercised in choosing a competent and skillful attorney to prepare and prosecute an application for patent. Valuable interests have been lost and destroyed in innumerable instances by the employment of incompetent counsel, and especially in this advice applicable to those who adopt the "No patent, no pay" system. Inventors who entrust their business to this class of attorneys do so at imminent risk, as the breadth and strength of the patent is never considered in view of a quick endeavor to get an allowance and obtain the fee.

THE PRESS CLAIMS COMPANY, John Wedderburn, General Manager, 618 F Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., representing a large number of inventors daily and weekly papers, and general periodicals of the country, was instrumental in securing from the government the use of the methods heretofore employed in this line of business. The said Company is prepared to take charge of all patent business entrusted to it for reasonable fees, and prepare and prosecute applications generally, including mechanical inventions, design patents, trade-marks, labels, copyrights, interferences, infringements, validity reports, and gives especial attention to rejected cases. It is also prepared to enter into competition with any firm in securing foreign patents.

Write for instructions and advice.

Uncle Sam will soon embark for the Sandwich Islands to interview Lili. He asserts that Grover will not be "in it" when he gets there. We presume it is in regard to a provisional government.

Rev. Curran is conducting a series of meetings here which are very liberally attended. Rev. Curran is a very able speaker, and handles his subjects proficiently. Somewhat of a change from the "savage in the dagout" business that we have been accustomed to. Rex, Lexington, Or. Feb. 5, '94.

THE EXAMPLE OF KINGS.

How the Gender of a Noun Came to be Changed.

The French court, ever fond of novelty, once carried its innovations in language so far as to alter the gender of a substantive in compliment to an infant mistake of their grand monarch. The word "carrosse," a coach, was originally feminine, as its termination implies, says Youth's Companion.

But when M. Menage published a dictionary he gave it as a word of masculine gender. The revolution as to the gender of this word arose from a trivial grammatical error.

Louis XIV. succeeded to the crown at the age of five years. Not long afterward, on inquiring for his coach one day, he happened to mistake the gender of the noun, and said "On est mon carrosse?" using the masculine pronoun instead of the feminine. The courtiers, on the principle that the king can do no wrong, even in grammar, at once treated the word "carrosse" as masculine, and so it has continued ever since.

"Everyone imitates the example of the king," used to be a courtly maxim, and it is even now acted upon more generally than those who imitate it would acknowledge. Yet even the most slavish imitators of royalty would hardly go so far as did the French courtiers during the preceding reign, that of Louis XIII.

This monarch also was a boy when he succeeded Henry IV. And being a boy he had no beard. Therefore the courtiers would wear no beard themselves. Not a man of them ventured to appear in the king's presence unless smoothly shaven.

PATENTS FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringing on others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.
