SILK FROM WOOD.

A Recent Discovery of Great Commercial Importance.

At Bradford, England, silk has been made from wood pulp so much like the real thing that it bids fair to occupy a man who was in Antwerp while the preparations were in progress for the place in commerce and use. It is pro-duced by subjecting vegetable fiber to the action of various acids, the reexposition. Representatives of all nations were there preparing exhibits from their respective countries. In the sult being a product said to be identical evening, says the Washington Star, all the visitors were in the habit of gathwith the filament of the worm, having its lightness, luster and all its qual ering in a large hall on the grounds to listen to the band play.
