PATENTS!

NOTICE TO INVENTORS.

There was never a time in the history of our country when the demand for inventions and improvements in the arts and sciences generally was so great as now. The conveniences of maskind in the factory and workshop, the household and on the farm, as well as in official life, require continual accessions to the appurtenance and impliments of each in order to save labor, time and expense. The political change in the administration of government does not affect the progress of the American inventor, who being on the alert, and ready to perceive the existing deficiencies, does not permit the affairs of government to deter bim from quickly conceiving the remedy to overcome existing discrepancies. Too great care cannot be exercised in choosing a competent and skillful attorney to prepare and prosecute an application for patent. Valuable interests have been lost and destroyed in innumerable instances by the employ ment of incompetent counsel, and especially is this advice applicable to those who adopt the "No patent, no pay" system. Inventors who entrust their business to this class of attorneys do so at imminent risk, as the breadth and strength of the patent is never considered in view of a quick endeavor to get an allowance and obtain the fee, THE PRESS CLAIMS COMPANY, John Wedderburn, General Manager 618 F street, N. W., Washington, D. C., representing a large number of important daily and weekly papers, and general periodicals of the country, was instituted to protect its patrons from the unsafe methods heretofore employed in this line of business. The said Conpany is prepared to take charge of all patent business entrusted to it for reasonable fees, and prepare and prosecute applications generally, including mechanical inventions, design patents, trade-marks, labels, copyrights, interferences, infringements, validity reports, and gives especial attenion to rejected cases. It is also prepared to enter into competition with any firm in securing foreign patents.

SOCIETY IN ENGLAND.

Pearls of Dow. -2,

Circles That Are Not Open to Mere Men of Money.

Aristocratic Nobles Who Are Above Asso ciating with Wealthy Americans Because of Their Financial Eminence.

There is a marked difference between the main body of the Americans who annually invade London nowadays and those who used to be seen years ago. Time was when the traveling Americans did not care for society, preferring to do the sights as speedily as possible and hurry off to other show places. Now visitors from the land of the free consider themselves quite as much in the social swim as any lord or lady in the peerage, are "up" in all " ways and customs of society, and are regarded by London swelldom as representative Americans. In general these are the sight-seers of the past the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before J. W. Morrow, county clerk, at Heppner, Oregon, on April 10, 1885, var.

He amost the following witnesses to prove the names the following witnesses to prove the name of the name and daughters. I regard Mr. Astor as a fair sample of the new American in England, says a correspondent of the Argonaut. His money, of course, enables him to do anything he likes. He might stand on his head on the top of frog down Pall Mall with Mr. Vanderbilt. It is doubtful, by the bye, if either of these performers would make him a cause of more pitving smiles and compassionate shoulder-shrugs than his forced intrusion into London jourhim show what they really think of his desertion of his own country. And I mance. rather suspect that he knows very few who are great enough in themselves to be indifferent to the money power he wields.

There is a class of noblemen among the English aristocracy who are above any and all outside influences al together-men whom gold does not dazzle. I regard them as the highest type of nobility in every sense, and 1 OTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE consider the duke of Northumberland as a striking instance of the sort of this claim, and that said proof will be made softed the country clerk of Morrow country at another. Monarchs are rarely literary, and his the very last of them to have set much devoted to the interests of inventors, value upon the personal relic of a novelist, however distinguished. Nevertheless, the French found it in the royal apartment at Abomey. There were some ingenious theories founded to, and, on the affair coming to the death had bee bought by a dealer in returns to the author. curiosities, who had placed it, with other showy articles, on the West African market. DEADLIEST KNOWN POISON. Shophanthidin, from an African Plant, an Atom of Which Is Dangerous. To the best of our knowledge, says the Brooklyn Eagle, the most deadly poison is that which was discovered by Prof. Frazer, of Edinburgh, Scotland, and known as shophanthidin. He separated it from the African poison plant, shophanthus hispidus, by means of ether and alcohol. As little as a onethousand-millionth part of an ounce of crystallized shophanthidin produces a distinctly injurious effect upon the heart, and a very small quantity is fatal. Another deadly poison is cyanogen gas, the principal ingredients of hydrocyanic or prussic acid.

At ordinary temperatures it is simply a gas, but can be condensed by cold and pressure into a thin, colorless liquid and becomes a solid at thirty degrees Fahrenheit. The inhalation in its gaseous state of a most minute quantity would cause instant death. One of the most deadly poisons is arseniuretted hydrogen, or arsenic, which is formed by decomposing an alloy of arsenic and zine with sulphuric acid. It is a colorless gas, possessing a fetid odor of garlie, and acts as a most deadly poison.

Adolph Ferdinand Gehlen, a chemist, born about 1775 at Butow, in Pomerania, was the discoverer of it. While experimenting with it at Munich, on July 15, he inhaled a single bubble of the pure gas and died in eight days from the effects. The accident occurred through his smelling at the operations have died from the effects
