TIPS FOR THE QUEEN. They Are Called Perquisites, But She Gets

Them Just the Same. Queen Victoria gets more tips than any other functionary in Great Britain, and, what is more, she insists on getting them. Of course they are not called tips. They are called perquisites, but it is all the same. An ex-attache, writing in the New York Tribune, says that among the most curious of them is her right to every whale or sturgeon captured on the coast of the united kingdom and brought to land. Both of these perquisites date back to the days of the Norman kings and it ppears that in the case of the whale he monsters were divided between the overeign and his consort, the queen taking the head in order that her wardobe might be replenished with the whalebone needed for the stiffening of her royal garments.

Another of the queen's backsheesh a certain number of magnificent Cashmere shawls, which are dispatched to her every year from the kingdom of Cashmere. They vary in value, as a rule, from three hundred to twelve hundred dollars apiece and the queen is accustomed to present one of them as a wedding present to every young girl of the aristocracy or in whose future she is in any way interested. Every tailor holding a patent of "Purveyor to her Majesty," if he conforms to ancient tradition and usage, should present her with a silver needle each

Another class of royal purveyors is called upon to present annually to her a table cloth, while from other sources she is entitled to an annual contribution of such varied tips as white doves, white hares, curry combs, fire tongs, scarlet hosiery, nightcaps, knives, lances and crossbows. Moreover, at the corona-tion the lord of the manor of Addington must present to the sovereign a 'dish of pottage" composed of "almond nilk, brawn of capons, sugar, spices, chickens parpoiled and chopped." the same ceremony the lord of the manor of Haydon is obliged by virture of his tenure from the crown to present the monarch with a towel, the ord of the manor of Workshop giving the sovereign a "right-handed glove. These are only a few of the various backsheesh to which Queen Victoria is entitled by tradition and usage.

SOMETHING ABOUT DIAMONDS. Their Appearance in the Rough, the Cutting and Best Fields.

The ruby mirrors the flame of fire, the sapphire reflects the blue of the heavens, the emerald pictures the depth of the sea, but the diamond is a dewrop laden with sunbeams, the mos poetic creation of an organic nature. Every moment it flashes a new colornow blue, now red, now royal purple, now golden yellow, says Home and Country.

In the rough-that is, just as the stone has been washed out of the clay and broken loose from the ore-a diamond presents the appearance of a crystal pebble, somewhat pointed at each end. It usually appears to be of a brownish hue but now and again a ray of light will seem to leap from the very heart of the stone. From this rough form of the gem the diamond cutter decides what the shape of the finished jewel is to be. It should be the aim of the diamond cutter to preserve this octahedral character of the gem. To accomplish this the rough stone is first split or chipped.

The operation is a most difficult one, requiring an insight into the character of each individual stone. There are hardly two gems that can be treated in a precisely similar manner. Every diamond has a thorough individuality and must be treated accordingly in order to obtain the best results. "splitting" is accomplished by fixing the gem in a block of cement, after which the angles must be split off in accordance with the direction of the erystallization. Flaws are also taken out in this operation and the diamond given its future shape.

The diamonds most highly prized are the Indian and Brazilian stones. They are generally of the purest white, the most complete transparency "water" and the most brilliant "fire."

An Awkward Situation. A physician of Ocosta, Wash., while botanizing in the woods near that place recently, stumbled across a big black bear, which got annoyed at his presence and chased him. The railroad was a few yards away, and the doctor took to the track and sprinted along it a few yards ahead of the beast, until a long trestle was reached, when the bear halted and squatted down to watch the doctor hop along the ties. When he was a third of the way across a freight train appeared at the further end. Out on a high treatle, with a bear wasting for him at one end and a freight train coming for him from the other, the doctor felt He dropped to a supporting beam, hung from the end of it while the

CRUEL SPORT IN INDIA.

Hindoos Care Nothing for Amusement Un less Accompanied by Physical Suffering or Great Danger-Battle of Hands and the Swinging Festival.

India is a land of sport, but occident als are always much surprised to find that sport, to be appreciated by the average mild Hindoo, must have something cruel about it, either to man or beast. It is to India, by the way, that Europe and America owe polo, which was introduced into British cantonments by the Manipuris. Hindoos are craving for bloody spectacles. Of horse racing the Hindoo is passionately fond; A steeplechase where there is every people, who do not hesitate to call to the unfortunate shekari who trains circulation

The cheetah catches his victim and, seizing it by the throat, buries his with greedy gasps. The trainer approaches gently, so gently that his footfall can scarcely be heard. The cheetah is growling ominously. His tail beats his sides in ferocious impatience. Quietly the man steals toward the crouching beast and slips the hood over the eyes; then the leash is passed around and all danger is averted. The head of the deer has to be severed, still leaving in the cheetah's mouth a goodly lump of bleeding flesh. There is nothing very sportsmanlike in this performance, but there is a great deal of danger attaching to it, and that danger devolves upon one man. There have been cases where the panther has absolutely refused to chase the deer, but has devoted his entire time and attention to the hunting party. Then the game was not voted a success.

A villainous amusement in India is that called panjan. It consists in locking hands and seeing who can be made to kneel. There is no fun in it, but still it is assidnously cultivated and hands are daily being broken in this inaue form of sport. Kite-flying is a national affair and bets of the most extraordinary magnitude are made as to who shall cut his opponent's string. The swinging festival, or churrule poojah, is another form of pleasure which could only satisfy a race naturally cruel. There is now a good deal of correspondence between the India office and the government of Calcutta with a view of stopping this detestable sport. Hundreds of Europeans visit the scene and leave immeasurably disgusted, but the natives find much to enjoy in it and beat their tom toms and blow their pipes with great gusto while the poor victims are swinging in midair. This sport has some remote connection with a religious rite, and thus tortured are probably fulfilling some bideous vow. Vows in India are common, and no vow can avail unless its performance inflicts some dreadful punishment upon the body. The affair is thus managed: A devotee has a hook passed through the muscles of his back, which hook is tied to the end of a crosspole. This beam can be tilted for the express purpose of having victims fastened to it. After the man is securely lashed to the pole he is lifted up into the air with his hands folded on the chest and the body fairly hangthat the situation was embarrassing. ing by the hooks. There is no other support. The muscles of the back alone hold him to the hook. The pole is then rotated by pulling on the ropes at the counterbalance end, its attachment on the vertical part permitting of free rotation. This gentle amusement the Indian government intend to abolish, but whether it will be done without serious trouble is a question.

Cruel Sport.

The Hindus are great swimmers, and swim dog fashion with their hands and feet beating the water. The reason of this is to sears their squatic enemies. There is a great swimming festival after the first rains, when the rivers are swollen. Then Hindus of all ages enter the turbulent flood and awim a given distance, shouting like demons and creating an enormous commotion. Crocodiles follow the swimmers and the slower awimmers fall an easy prey to those awful monsters. But it is port-sport to those who take part in the exciting adventures, but greater sport to the thousands who follow the men in the water from the banks, and the victim to the sugger has little sympathy wasted on him by the eager, fundaming arows.

A recent brief announcement, unnoticed by many, had an important bearing on the "Indian question," or on the duration of that question, says the Kansas City Star. It was, seemingly, that the last mounted soldier of the United States army had been ordered out of the Indian Territory, something that had never before happened. Ever since the white man landed on the shores of what are now the United States a white man with a gun has been watching the Indian. The first semblance of an army was raised to fight Indians; almost the first structure raised on the shore was a fort for protection against Indians; so, for two hundred years and more as the Indian has falien back, the soldier and the fort have moved with him. Then the white man moved around to the western ocean and the western shore, to and soldier and settler altogether pressing on. Now the Indians moved back from the Atlantic and Pacific to the great central plains seem surrounded. and now comes the order to take off the guard. "He can neither fight nor fly" is the idea of this order. "He must be a 'good Indian' now. The troopers can unsaddle and take a long rest from now on." Does not this really look as if we were approaching the last hour of the last Indian? In truth, the original "real" Indian, absolutely unchanged by contact with the white man, has gone now except in the far deserts and mountain fastnesses. In 1846, Francis Parkman tells us in the "Oregon Trail," he saw Indians who had not emerged from the "stone age," and used implements and weapons such as may have connection with a religious rite, and been used by people before Noah's the men who permit themselves to be dood. But could such Indians be found now? Certainly not in the region where Mr. Parkman found them. El-
