is a lingering doubt in the minds of some as to whether or not the young man was to blame.

BAFFLES COUNTERFEITERS.
The Unlikely Opal Defies the Imitative Skill of the Moderns.

One kind of opal, the hydropone of Mexico, loses its beauty and becomes dull and colorless when exposed to water. The same stone, says the West-minister Review, it is said, can be restored to its color and beauty by subjecting it to a certain degree of heat.
A writer on the subject says that the opal is always much more brilliant on a warm day, and that a sharp dealer will always hold one in his hand a short time before showing it to a purchaser. In ancient times the opal was most successfully imitated by a glass paste, which could only be distinguished from the real gem by the most careful experts. The art has become extremely lost, for the best counterfeiters fail to produce a stone that in the least baffles the connoisseur. The finest opal of modern times, says King, was one which belonged to Empress Josephine, and which was called the "Burning of Troy," because of the innumerable red flames blazing upon its surface, while the reverse was perfectly opaque. In the troublous times that followed the Napoleonic period the gem was lost sight of, and there is left no trace of it. There are two wonderful opals among the French crown jewels, one of which is set in the clasp of the imperial cloak. Empress Eugenie is said to have a most superb specimen of these gems and would not wear an opal for any persuasion.
Queen Victoria does not share this feeling with her. She, on the contrary, admires the gem very much, and has given to each of her daughters, or their marriage day, various pieces of jewelry set with the iridescent gem.
There are many varieties of opals coming from almost as many quarters of the globe. The opal found in Hungary was thought to be harder and more durable than those found in Mexico and South America, but since the better development of the mines in those places stones have been found quite the equal of Hungarian ones.

SALT WATER IN CEMENT.
The Sulphates of the Sea Are Very Destructive.

In the opinion of Dr. Michaelis, of Berlin, the greatest enemies to the permanency of the Portland cement used in marine structures are the sulphates contained in sea water. If there is any great quantity of alumina and ferric oxide in the cement the structure breaks up sooner than otherwise. This is accounted for by the fact that the sulphate forms, with the aluminate and ferrate of lime, a number of crystalline compounds, such as basic sulphate of lime, aluminosulphate and ferro-sulphate of lime. These compounds take up a large quantity of water of crystallization, so that the total volume is much increased. Hence the weakness and disintegration of the cement structure. Dr. Michaelis considers that the separation of hydrate of magnesia is quite innocuous, for it is only displaced from its solution in the form of a floculent, slimy hydrate, which, if anything, is useful in stopping up the pores. His general recommendation to users of concrete for marine work is to choose a cement rich in silica and as poor as possible in alumina and ferric oxide, and to employ the structure with an impenetrable mixture composed of one part of cement with two to two and one-half parts of sand of mixed grain, of which at least one-third should be very fine sand, and to this the requisite amount of ballast should be added.

CASTE FOLLOWS THE NOSE.
Anthropologists say the Nose Tells the Culture of Man.

Anthropology, said Sir William Flower, is becoming of the highest importance in politics. If we take a series of castes in Bengal, Behar or the northwestern provinces and arrange them in the order of the average nasal index, so that the caste with the finest nose shall be at the top, and that with the coarsest at the bottom of the list, it will be found that this order substantially corresponds with the accepted order of social precedence.
The casteless tribes who have not yet entered the Brahminical system occupy the lowest place in both series.
The fisher castes are a trifle higher in the scale; the pastoral, the cultivating, and a group of cognate castes—from whose hands a Brahmin may take water—follow in due order; and from them we pass to the trading and the landholding classes and the upper crust of Hindu society.
Thus it is scarcely a paradox to lay down as a law of the caste organization in Eastern India that a man's social status varies in inverse ratio to the width of his nose.

The Most Ancient Song.
A topical song three thousand years old was sung in a comic opera lately produced in Australia by a traveling Chinese company. The history of this venerable ballad is authenticated by the affirmation of the chief comedian of the troupe, who avers that the song has been sung in the Chinese stage, since 1000 B. C. A Melbourne critic says the accompanying melody "consisted partly of a Chinese chopping wood, partly of another celestial blowing a bull's horn with horrible intermittency of whirr, and partly of a curious stringed instrument, which makes a noise like an infant crying in the night."
