American houses, and it struck him as being most delightful. Not that "verandas" were unknown, by any means, in other parts of the world, but in England people only had gardens or terrace, where they resorted in warm weather. The broad plazza so common to the seaside and country residence here, and which is furnished as elaborately as any room in the home. was unique. "You know, we Londoners are content with a bit of garden with our houses." "And very lovely they are, too," interposed an auditor. Yes, so they are, with the ivied walls and the old trees and shrubs! We who are lucky to have gardens live in them in warm weather, but it is often damp, don't you know, on the ground. There are all sorts of devices in wicker furniture to save us from rheumatism, and there are arbors, but I would like to buy one of your plazzas and set it up at home! They are a charming 'institution,' as you Americans say."

A curious story of a strike is told at one of the mills. The hours of labor are long-from dawn to twilight. In from any foreign country found infested the same. the winter the hours are fewer, but in summer the saws are buzzing and the whole community alive and at work before the sun has touched the tree tops. A northern foreman of philanthropic principles took charge of a certain mill, and sorrowed within his heart for the poor fellows wearing out their lives with the cant-hook and saw. So he deereed that from seven o'clock in the morning to six in the afternoon should constitute the labor of a day.

There was a murmur in the camp. and in two days there was a general strike. Called upon for reasons, the spokesman stated the case of the men: "We all jus' doan like dis yar gwine ter wuk at seben o'clock. Wha's de use ob sittin' aroun' fer two hours in the mawnin' 'fo' gwine to wuk? We jus' ain' gwine to stan' it, dat's all."

So the strike was declared off by the uperintendent agreeing to allow all hands to go to work at dawn and keep at it as long as they could see.

BLUE-EYED INDIANS.

They Live in Mexico and Are Known as matter of business we must sell it. " Griegos."

In a mountain village, perhaps a day's ride from Mexico City, lives a tribe of exclusive, aristocratic Indians called "los Griegos," the Greeks, says the Chicago Tribune. They are light complexioned and the majority have blue eyes and light hair. They dress principally in two shades of blue and their clothing is good, well made and generally embroidered with the bead and silk embroidery of which Indians are so fond. Their houses are better built and furnished than is usual among Indians. Many have planos on the Pacific coast is known only as a and other musical instruments upon man-eater. The shovel-nosed sharks which they play with considerable are sand sharks, too cowardly to attack skill. These "Griegos" have no commercial or social connections with other tribes, holding aloof from even those who live at the base of the mountain on which their village is sittheir own manufacturing, have their tutions, and seldom or never marry out-
