THE FOURTH AT ELGIN—HON. W. R. Ellis, congressman from this district was a passenger on the west-bound train last evening. He was returning with Mrs. Ellis and their little son from Elgin, where he had delivered the oration at the reunion of the G. A. R. on the Fourth. The celebration was quite an affair, at least 5,000 people being present from points in the Grand and valley and surrounding country.

IN ANCIENT EGYPT. Strikes Said to Have Been Numerous Along the River Nile. The reporter of the time of Rameses IX, does not take notice of the walking delegate, though strikes were numerous then among the Theban workmen. An laborers were paid in food, the contractors were often behindhand with their supplies.

FOR AN UNSPOKEN SPEECH. The Irish Patriot Enlarged for Words He Didn't Say. A member of the Land league was sent from Dublin to a certain district to get up a meeting and make a speech, says a foreign exchange. On reaching the town where the meeting was to be held, the speaker met a friend, and both being general fellows, they retired to a public house and had something. Then they began talking over old-time reminiscences, and the first thing the land leaguer knew was that the attendant had come in to light the lamp.

PHYSIC WITH YOUR PIE. The "Food Cure" a New Wrinkle Among Doctors in England. The "food cure," is a comparatively new idea, introduced into England by several physicians of advanced ideas, who boldly advanced the proposition that they can cure ordinary human ills by dieting and without the use of medicines, says the New York Mail and Express.

With brains, sir," was the celebrated rejoinder of Sir Joshua Reynolds to the question of an inquisitive and probably shallow young painter who asked him with what he mixed his colors. It is brains the ingredient that was left out of the loaves which were exhibited at the more food show; asks Kate Field, Washington. Four hundred competing loaves all fell short of the standard, if it is reported fairly. It is more generous to believe, however, that the standard has been raised by an intelligence which means to educate the community.

In New York a few exclusive bakers advertise "high-class bread" at high-class prices; actually it is not too good. But brains in Boston, joined with brotherly kindness, have produced bread which may challenge any competition and which is sold to the public in tiny loaves, perhaps better called long rolls, at one cent apiece; faultless bread; sweet as the wheat can make it, but not sweeter; light and fine and close; exquisitely baked in the mild, slow heat of a brick oven. This bread, such as the rich seldom taste, comes daily from the New England Kitchen for all who are so fortunate as to be able to send for it. It is the product of the intelligence and philanthropy of a society for the promotion of public health.

A wrestling match for $50 a side between Jeff Hayes and a man from Spokane named Watson drew a large crowd to the Army hall on the afternoon of the Fourth. Watson, who is much larger and more muscular looking than Hayes, easily secured the first fall within a minute. The little Lone Rock man, however, succeeded in winning the last fall and the match for his bury opponent. The last bout lasted several minutes, and both wrestlers appeared very well done up ere Jeff landed the Spokane athlete on his hips and shoulder. Side-betting was light, and was indulged in chiefly by Lone Rock parties, who seemed to be divided upon the merits of the men.

At the time that Zach Chandler was first a member of the senate he was one of the youngest members of that body. Besides having a youthful appearance, all the other men seemed quite old to him. On the last day of the first term of Senator Mitchell, of Oregon, Chandler and he sat in the barber shop and chatted about events of the session, and finally Chandler began talking about his earlier career.

"When I went to Detroit," he said, "there were not more than fifty houses in the place. Now it has become one of the leading cities of the west. Michigan was a territory, and we had some pretty hard times there, but I stuck to it, and have been rather successful. Why," he added rather proudly, "I was elected to the senate when I was 44 years old."

"That's nothing," answered Senator Mitchell, laconically. "Nothing" exclaimed Chandler. "Well, I consider it a great deal to have been elected to the United States senate at 44."

"Well," replied Mitchell, quietly, "I have served six years in the senate and am not 44 yet."

"I give it up," replied Chandler, "you have the best of me. The further west we go the more push we have."

Our learned physiologists, after having measured hundreds of skeletons, testify that the men of our times are from one to two centimeters taller than the men of the middle ages. We possess their war garments, and it turns out that we appear not only to have grown taller since the time when these were manufactured, but our shoulders could never fit into the steel corsets of our so-called athletic forefathers.

The popular tendency to enlarge everything that is far off and belittled that which is so close by is responsible for the opinion that the men of the present time are degenerate reductions of the men of medieval times, who were giants clad in iron and with muscles of steel. The Paris Figaro thus shows the absurdity of this opinion.

Our learned physiologists, after having measured hundreds of skeletons, testify that the men of our times are from one to two centimeters taller than the men of the middle ages. We possess their war garments, and it turns out that we appear not only to have grown taller since the time when these were manufactured, but our shoulders could never fit into the steel corsets of our so-called athletic forefathers.

But it is evident that their ancestors, people of little foresight, never thought of their grandchildren, and these grandchildren were unable to put on the armor. It was too small for them. So much for the stature of our ancestors. As to their supposed strength, we have no proof beyond the weight of the equipment of the men-of-arms.

But the harness of the knights was very much lighter than has commonly been supposed. According to one of the catalogues of the Museum of Artillery the weight of the complete armor did not, as a rule, exceed fifty pounds, and inasmuch as those who wore it were horsemen, it was the horse that had to bear the greater part of the fatigue.
