

INCONSISTENT COMPARISON.

This exceedingly funny item is characteristic of the Indianapolis Journal:

"How silver monometallism would increase the amount of money per capita, which the free coinage people think of such great importance is possibly illustrated by the figures of the silver countries. Mexico has $4.71 per capita, India, $3.33, and China, $2.08. But of course a little silver goes a great way among the laboring people of these countries. It has to, you see."

Now, what does all that prove? Would those countries have had more money had they adopted the gold standard in 1873? How much per capita have the Sioux Indians on the reservation? How much have the Comanches in Arizona? It is strange that the peaceful, poor wretches of India and the peons of Mexico are not all Jay Goulds! If it was good to take away half the money of the world twenty-two years ago, why does the Journal want to cling to the other half, and why does it make fun of people who have only a little money? Those arguments may do on the Wabash and they may comfort the farmers there, who will sell their wheat and their corn this year at half price, but there is not any particular sense about the whole business after all. —Salt Lake Tribune.

SOMEONE has remarked that Cleveland is "a Jefferson democrat." They probably meant a Joe Jefferson democrat.

A TACOMA man has married his step-mother. He thus escapes having a mother-in-law. Of the two evils choose the lesser.

WE feel it a duty to caution Mr. Cleveland against the free coinage of girls, as a thing likely to destroy the purity of the sexes. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat (goldbug).

THIS third term Cleveland talk is absurd. Let him down easy. A St. Louis democratic paper even asserts that if the present were his first term he couldn't get a second.

FIVE soda fountains recently exploded in one day back in Hudson, Mass. It was fortunate that the explosions occurred before the citizens had disposed of the contents.

A CINCINNATI judge recently declared that the man who gave all his wages to his wife was a fool. The married women of Cincinnati are now positive that the judge gives his wife every cent he earns. —New York Press.

A DEMOCRATIC contemporary, which, three years ago hooted at "tin mills in the United States," now boastfully says: "There are forty times as many tin mills running under the Wilson bill as there were under the McKinley bill." But where is the consistency?

ON Monday, July 22, at midnight, all the gambling dens in Montana closed in pursuance of a law recently enacted by the legislature of that state. While gambling may be carried on in the future up there, yet it will not be under the cover of the law, and will never again be on so great a scale.

THE Horr-Harvey debate is now a thing of the past, having ended last Monday, and it is safe to say but few opinions on the financial question have been changed by this war of words. Harvey's ability was a general surprise, in fact many of his supporters were confident that he would annihilate the author of Gold in a short time, but now the general opinion of the press seems to be favorable to Harvey. In fact he is credited with the greatest strength throughout the entire debate.

THE SUN A CORPSE.

THE Portland Sun, which has shone so brilliantly in the interests of the people since the 15th of last October, ceased publication with the last issue of July. To many this was not a surprise, as it was known that the paper could not much longer exist under the present management. However, it was hoped by those interested that a change would be made by which the Examiner would take charge of the paper, but this effort also evidently failed, and the Sun is no more. The Sun has made many friends during its brief career, who will regret to hear of its death. But a newspaper, as all should know, cannot exist on promises. As a general newspaper, the Oregonian is replete in every respect, and far ahead of Portland and its field in the northwest. And were it more in sympathy with the interests of the common people, the laborers and the masses, there would never have been the least demand or opening for another morning paper in Oregon's metropolis. So, from a political standpoint, it is to be hoped that this excellent morning daily will not continue to be so narrow or radical in its editorial views, and that it may soon enter the field formerly occupied by the Sun, as the paper of the people, and an unbiased representative of republicanism, with banner unfurled, when the entire republican press of this state will join with the Oregonian in every effort for the betterment and success of the republican party in Oregon.

OUR goldbug friends say that all Americans favor international bimetalism. This, we regret to say, is not true. In the last issue of "Sound Currency," a pamphlet published in the interest of our Wall street corporationists, is an article that pretends to present a long line of argument showing that international bimetalism is the worst of follies and no more practicable than national bimetalism. This is the same paper that answered Coin by publishing "Coin's Financial Fool," and was also one of the leading backers of Horr in the recent debate. Is it not true that the goldbug press and powder?

A NEAT illustration of Mount Rainier, Washington, accompanied by a brief description of the same, appeared in the last issue of the Scientific American. As it spoke of the mountain as Rainier instead of Tacoma, it is well to look out for a cyclone up in that city that knows it by none other than the latter name. However, it is safe to say that Seattle is pleased.

ACCORDING to the Kansas City Star a lad was sent up in a balloon recently and came down all right. Now a famous donkey, "Pegasus," will make the next trip. It was decided to try it or the boy first, and, if nothing befell him, to give "Pegasus" the next whirl. This is probably on the principle that there are more boys than mules in Missouri.

Small Beginnings. Make great endings sometimes. Ailments that we are apt to consider trivial often grow, through neglect, into atrocious maladies, dangerous to themselves and productive of others. It is the disregard of the earlier indications of all health which leads to the establishment of all sorts of maladies on a chronic basis. Moreover, there are certain disorders incident to the season, such as malaria and rheumatism, against which it is all ways desirable to fortify the system after exposure to the conditions which produce them. Cold, damp and miasmatic air are sure counteracted by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. After you have incurred risk from these illnesses, a wine glassful or two of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters directly afterward should be swallowed. For malaria, dyspepsia, liver complaint, kidney and bladder trouble, nervousness and debility it is the most deservedly popular of remedies and preventative. A wine glassful before meals promotes appetite.

A SUCCESSFUL TERM. Miss Martha Neville returned home Wednesday from Hinton creek where she has just closed a very successful three months term of school. The school was closed last Friday with a very appropriate program of dialogues, recitations and songs which was listened to by nearly every parent of the district. An important feature of the day's proceedings was a large basket dinner which was provided by the good people of that section.

As this is the first term of school taught at that place, the district being a new one, the Gazette takes pleasure in publishing the following favorable report of District No. 60 commencing April 29, 1895, ending July 26, 1895: Number of pupils enrolled..... 635 Number of days absent..... 285 Average number belonging..... 115 Average daily attendance..... 112 Actual days present..... 112

LIKE THE DAYS OF SIXTY-TWO.

The following is a description of the soldiers reunion held at Lexington recently, as seen by one of the veterans who participated: Were you at the celebration on the Third and Fourth? If so, I am sure you got your money's worth. The people were all there from near and from far. To attend the great reunion of the G. A. R. Let us all meet together, said the boys who wore the blue. And tell the stories over, they are just as good as new: Of the long weary marches, of the skirmish and the scout, Of the days spent in Dixie, those days of fear and doubt.

I want to be their sure, said Comrade League, And live a sin these days of heartache and fatigue. Let me hear the merriment whistles as in the days of yore. Let me face the cannon's mouth and hear its deafening roar. A firecracker snapped just then at his side, "Cut for the woods," the brave comrade cried. The smell of burning powder to him was nothing new. He was so used to that in the days of sixty-two, I want to be on hand at the first but I call. And stay till the finish, said Comrade Bell, "I'll be a good thing to have the people see The hardships and privations that came to you and me."

In a tent nicely furnished, with mattress and spring bed, When night came on he laid his weary (7) head, "Well, just behind the tent on a stove nice and new. His wife cooked the grub "all the same" as sixty-two. I want to build a fire and be alone to sup, Fry my bacon on a stick, have my coffee in a cup, Eat my beans on a tin, then go away all sorrow, said Comrade J. S. Boothby, representative from Morrow.

Ye shades of Lincoln, such a pile of grub As wife and daughter cooked, 'twould more than fill a tub. Comrade Boothby and his friends around the table drew. It reminded him so much of the days of sixty-two. Let me sleep once more, let me rest my head On a stone for a pillow, a blanket for my bed, said Comrade Andy Stephenson to a young city chap. Sleeping on the ground, I tell you, it's "a snap." I passed by his couch when the day's fun was over. He had mattresses and pillows and blankets galore. Snug between two sheets he slept the night through. It seemed so much like the days of sixty-two. Touching elbow to elbow in line let me stand And march to the music of the old martial band I care not for the dust nor the heat of the sun, said Comrade Willis, for marching in such fun. Keeping step to the music of the drum and fife, Comrade Willis rode along in a bugby with his wife. With a great linen duster to protect his suit of blue, Oh, this is just exactly like the days of sixty-two. So the days passed by and the time flew away. The "boys" of thirty years ago now old and gray, told the stories over, to them as good as new. But they have grown tremendous since the days of sixty-two. GALLOWAY, Or., July 21, 1895.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism. WERTHEIMER, Cal., March 21, 1894. —Some time ago I was afflicted with rheumatism, I found that I had rheumatism in my knee so badly that, as I remarked to my wife, it would be impossible for me to attend to business that day. Remembering that I had some of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in my store I sent for a bottle and rubbed the afflicted parts thoroughly. It, according to directions, within an hour I was completely relieved. One application had done the business. It is the best liniment on the market, and I sell it under a positive guarantee. R. T. TAKEN TO THE ASYLUM. Crased by Strange Voices and Fears That Somebody is Trying to Kill Him. I. M. L. Forgie, of this city, who has been at St. Vincent's hospital for a month past, and who recently escaped and wandered aimlessly through the streets of Portland, was examined by the county court of Multnomah county last Monday for insanity.

LaForgie's case is reported to be a peculiarly unfortunate one. He explained to Judge Northrup that he escaped from confinement at the hospital because they were going to kill him. He also informed the judge that he had two little motherless children, who are living in this city. LaForgie says after his relatives sent him down for treatment at the hospital they never took the trouble to look after him any more. He is troubled with voices and noises that drive him to distraction. He talked clearly about his illness. "I think I ought to get away out in the country—in the fresh air, where I can be alone," he said, longingly, during the examination. "These voices are always threatening to shoot me. I hear my children's voices, too. This confinement is what nearly kills me." He talked on in this strain until the physician asked him if he wouldn't like to go to another hospital where they would look after him, keep him from harming himself and let him work out in the air. The old man said perhaps that would be best. "If they'd only let me see my children," he pleaded.

"Well, would that stop those voices you hear?" inquired the doctor. "I don't know," said the old man, pathetically. LaForgie said he was a carpenter by occupation and was 45 years old. He said his mother used to have the same strange attacks. Those ceaseless voices in the room, outside of the walls and everywhere were crying at him night and day, but particularly at night. An order for his commitment to the asylum was made out, and he was taken up to Salem on the evening train, where all will hope for his speedy recovery.

Sometimes ago I was taken sick with a cramp in the stomach followed by diarrhoea. I took a couple of doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and was immediately relieved. I consider it the best medicine in the market for all such complaints. I have used it the remedy to attack and everyone who uses it speaks highly of it. J. W. Hendrick, Valley Center, Cal. IT IS SAID

THAT the voters in the United States in 1890 numbered 16,940,311. THAT the average strength of a horse is seven and a half times greater than that of a man. THAT policemen in citizens' clothes are recognized by their shoes by New York sharpers. THAT two-thirds of the gold now in use in the world was discovered during the last fifty years. THAT twelve years ago one sailor in every 100 who went to sea lost his life; now only one in 256 is lost. THAT the death rate averages less among clergymen than among any other class of professional men. THAT the loss of champagne by bursting bottles sometimes amounts to as much as twenty-five per cent. THAT the English language is spoken and written and read by 100,000,000. It is intelligible to at least 50,000,000 more. THAT San Francisco has one saloon to every 93 persons. Albany comes next with one to every 110 persons, and New Orleans one to every 151 persons.

A LITTLE HUMOR. Hicks—"You say that Bings is to be tried for heresy?" Wicks—"Yes; he refuses to believe that 'schism' is pronounced 'sim.'"—Boston Transcript.

"I HAVE rented a handsome cottage at the beach for the summer." "I thought you would do something of the kind when I heard that you had failed."—N. Y. Press. "WHAT was it that caused you to break your engagement to Tom?" "O, one night he began speaking seriously of getting married, and I thought that was going a little bit too far."—Brooklyn Life.

MARVELOUS RESULTS. From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Riv. Junction she was brought down with a severe case of La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and brought high satisfaction to all." Trial bottles sent free at T. W. Ayers, Jr. drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.

A GENEHOUS SPASM. But It Failed to Last for Any Great Length of Time. The little four-year-old had gone to the grocery with her grandmother, says the San Francisco Chronicle, and the grocer gave the child five little chocolate-drops. It was a hot day, and she took them in her tiny little hand and held them there until she got home. A spasm of generosity struck through her, and she would share the bonbons with her brother, sister and a small chum across the way. Chums are necessities of our vanity. We must have somebody to air our views to, and we select a somebody in whom we are especially fond of because he or she listens to us. Just as soon as a chum begins to show that he's bored with our recital of our excellencies there's an end of the most sacred friendship. And this chum business begins very early in life, showing that vanity is coeval with hair. The small child held on to her five little chocolate-drops, and when she got home she sat down by her grandmother and opened her hand. The identity of the five drops was rather difficult to segregate by that time, but she managed to count them. She ate one and then she said:

"Grandma, I've got to give one to Charlie, and one to Helen, and one to Alma, and I'll keep this one till I meet the children." That was settled and she went about with the chocolate-drops in her hand, occasionally opening it to look at them. She gradually yielded to temptation and ate the one she was keeping for herself, leaving three. Fifteen minutes later she came to the grandma. "Grandma, Alma's sick—awful sick." "Is she?" "Yes, she's awful sick. She hasn't been at school for two days." "Dear, dear! I'm sorry." "I think, grandma, Alma's mother would not like her to eat chocolate when she's so sick." And she ate the second chocolate-drop. Fifteen minutes passed again and again she appeared. "Grandma, what was it Helen said about chocolate?" "I'm sure I don't know." "Didn't Helen say that chocolate-drops got all dust an' made her throat sore?" Then her grandma stopped her little game and made her stick to her first proposal.
