A TRAGEDY IN PORTLAND.

Drs. Holmes and Ausplund Fight a Due With Pistols-Jealousy the Cause-Both Badly Wounded.

At noon last Friday the tenants of the Dekum building, at the corner of Third and Washington streets, in Portland, were startled by the report of several pistol shots issuing from the office of Dr. H. R. Holmes. Rushing in they found the prostrate bodies of Dr. Holmes and Dr. R. K. Ausplund, each holding a smoking pistol in his hand. Ausplund was bleeding from three wounds, one in the right forearm, one through the left lung, just missing his heart, and one in very painful wound. Just how many shots were fired altogether neither the duelists nor snyone else can state positively, but it is thought that the number was nine. Dr. Holmes emptied his pistol, which has five chambers, and but one barrel of Ausplund's pistol remains loaded. The shooting took place in the reception room, and there were sundry holes in the walls and doors that show some of the bullets went wide SEPTEMBER FASHIONS.-Another new picycle costume, which combines the unrestrained freedom of bloomers with the more becomining modesty of "regular" walking attire, is illustrated on the colored cover page of Toilettes. This dress is expressly designed to overcome the dragging effect of long skirts for wheelwomen while pedaling; the fullness of the skirt is gathered around the hips in a number of horizontal folds and held in place by narrow leather strips. For walking these folds are released, so the dress hangs in full length down to the ground. There are fully 150 other equally original and interesting designs for women's and children's wear, and no effort is spared to make this magazine what it justly claims to be, the most popular fashion magazine of America.
