A BICYCLE CHASE.

BY MRS. M. L. RAYNF.

Milo Warren was making a call on a girl to whom he was fondly attached although he had never told her so But this was a case where actions speak louder than words, and-leave a girl alone for finding out if a young man regards her with favor. Every girl is clairvoyant where affairs of th heart are concerned.

They were talking about their birthdays, and the pleasant custom of giving STING presents at such a time. "Let me see," said Milo, thoughtfully, "did you say your birthday came in CONTAGIOUS September, Miss Nellie?"

demurely. "Then it was December, wasn't it?

diamond, perhaps!" "Or a souvenir spoon," laughed Nellie; "you know they made jewel-spoons NORTHERN Ry. . PACIFIC RY. for birthday gifts, but all the girls changed their birthdays to December, and the young men could not stand the expense, and they sent a petition to the manufacturers, asking them to discontinue the custom, so no more spoons are in the market."

"I-I-I-really wish you would tell me when your natal day arrives. I might at least send you a bunch of St. Paul Kansas City roses, in remembrance of all the-the -happy days we have spent together. Is it this month, Miss Nellie?"

"You remind me of the parlor game: 'Is it this? Is it that?" said Miss Nellie, and then fearing that the young man was becoming sentimental she turned the conversation to other subjects.

But the next day Milo Warren dropped casually into the store where Miss Nellie Newton's best brother was engaged as bookkeeper, and inquired solemnly at the grated window, which permitted a segment of his countenance to appear, if that young man would take lunch with him.

"Certainly," was the brusque reply from a mouth full of pens; "I'll meet thee at Philippi-I mean at Hunger & Co.'s-in an hour." He was there, and at the pleasant ticular star?" "Why, of course you do-I quite forgot-she's your own sister!"

"Well, I like that! And you want to make her a birthday present and don't know the day. Sorry, old fellow, but I can't help you out. Nellie would take my head off if I told." That ended the lunch, but an unforeseen thing happened. Just as Milo Warren left his company at the corner

he saw an urchin he knew. It was the infliction known as Nellie's youngest brother, age seven, capacity for mischief seven times seven, precocity unlimited by any period of time. Milo, with malice prepense, engaged the dear child in a surfeit of sweets, and then asked, as if the idea was not of the least consequence and had just occurred to him: When does Sister Nellie have a birthday?" The dear child looked at him for a moment, drew his mouth round under his ear, elevated both eyebrows, and said, in a confiding, infantile voice:

"What'll yer give ter know?" Advantageous terms being made, the coy puckered his mouth for a whistle,

So he waited and tried to possess his soul with patience, and learn to ride a bicycle without the zigzag motion that had endangered the spread of good things provided Milo lives of the populace and nearly caused his arrest by the police.

Then he made the discovery that if haven't told her so, and you think she he gave his wheel its head, it would maybe likes you awfully-no, I don't behave much better than when he mean that-but if that girl has a birth- guided it carefully, to the end that it day, and you want to make her a prest traversed both sides of the street at ent, and she won't tell you when it is once. Can't found himself skimming along like a bird on the wing, with an exultant Lyman Newton laid aside his knife sense of freedom and delight, and he and fork, and looking Milo in the face longed to see Nellie and tell her what he had been trying to say for months-past him a vision in bloomers, one of those dreadful new women of whom "Reducing your heroics to a plain he had heard, and now was to see. He statement, then, you want to give a almost felt that it was disloyalty to girl of your acquaintance a birthday gentle little Nellie to even look at such an apparition; but somehow she looked so quaint in her saucy jacket and baggy trousers, her neatly gaitered feet were so pertand independent, that Milo looked and looked again, then he gave a great whoop, and took after the flying wheel like a streak of lightning. His confidence stood him instead of LIGHT, STRONG, skill. He went spinning along in fine > style until he reached a parallel with the girl with bloomers, then he leaned over to speak to her, toppled and fell in a heap, but not before he had gasped: Nellie! That young lady skillfully eluded the wreck, made a fancy run and turn, and as Milo gathered himself up, said, pleasantly: "Why, Mr. Warren, I didn't know that you rode a wheel." "I don't," said the young man, ruefully, feeling of his elbow to determine whether it was dislocated or merely abraded, "but you, Miss Nellie, are quite an expert." Miss Nellie murmured something about the wheel being a present from her brother, and that she had not cared to ride, but did just to please him. "But you ought to see my little brother ride," she said, with enthusiasm; "he rides the wheel when I am A. W. Milo was walking along, leading his wheel, as if he preferred that way, and Miss Nellie gave him several exhibitions of her skill, and each moment made a stronger and more lasting impression on the poor fellow's heart. But even bicycle courtship comes to an end, and they were at Nellie's home, asked for a glass of water, and before it was brought he sat down with the wheel on the sidewaik. It was a sudden and most effective thought better of it and gave the fol- stroke of art.
