A CLOSE TRADE.

An Instance of "Nearness" That Is Hard to Beat. The close-fisted and the absent-minded serve a similar use-they amuse their neighbors. The New York Sun quotes a man from the rural districts as telling a story of a Mr. Putterby, an old-time townsman of his, whose reputation for "nearness" was evidently well deserved. Locally he was thought to be almost a prodigy in this respect, but no story of this kind is so good but that another can be found to beat it. One of the coins current in those days was the old Spanish silver-piece, which passed for twelve and a half cents, and was variously called "ninepence," "York shilling" and "bit." It NEVER GROW OLD. Parts of the Physical System Which Never Wear Out.

In his work on the senile heart Dr. Balfour tells us that there are two parts of the human organism which, if wisely used, "largely escape senile failure." These two, says the Medical Record. are the brain and the heart. Persons who think have often wondered why brain workers, great statesmen and others, should continue to work with almost unimpaired mental activity and energy up to a period when most of the organs and functions of the body are in nursing. If they do not get it at the There is a physiological reason for this, and Dr. Balfour tells us what it is. It is in vain to form any resolution against making a pet of any one of them, writes Mrs. Bishop in "Journeys in Persia." My new acquisition, Boy, insists on being petted, and his enticing ways are irresistible. He is always tethered in front of my tent with a rope long enough to give him considerable liberty. and he took advantage of it the very first day to come into the tent and make it apparent that he wanted me to divide a lemon with him. Grapes were his preference; then came cucumbers, bread and biscuits. Finally he drank milk out of a soup plate. He comes up to me and puts down his head to have his cars rubbed, and if I do not attend to him at once, or if I cease attending to him, he gives me a gentle but admonitory thump. I dine outside the tent, and he is tied to my chair and waits with wonderful patience for the odds and ends, only occasionally rubbing his nose against my face to remind he is there. A friendly snuffle is the only sound he makes. He does not know how to fight, or that teeth and heels are Spain. And if her boldness was in- for any other uses than eating and and walking. He comes when I call him, stops when I do, accompanies me when I leave the road in search of flowers, and usually puts his head on my shoulder or under my arm. To him I am an embodiment of melons cucumbers, grapes, peaches, biscults and sugar, with a good deal of petting and ear-rubbing thrown in.

One night when Mr. Issac Beece was stopping with me, says M. F. Hatch, a prominent merchant of Quartermaster, Washington, I heard him groaning. On going to his room I found him suffering from cramp colic. He was in such agony I feared he would die. I hastily gave him a dose of Chamberlain's Colic. Cholers and Distriposa Remedy. He was soon relieved and the first words he uttered were, "what was that stuff you gave me?" MODIFICATIONS OF SHEEP. An Animal That Would Not Survive Man's Extinction.

The sheep has undergone more modifleations at the hands of man than any other animal. All the rest of our domestic animals have proved their capacity to reassume the habits of their wild encestors, but no once tamed sheep has taken to a life of independence. This, writes Dr. Louis Robinson in North American Review, is at first surprising, because many kinds, such as the Scotch mountain sheep, and those upon the high lands of Chill and Patagonia, manage to live and thrive with very little aid from their masters. Yet it is found that even the hardy pampas sheep cannot hold his own when that aid is wanting. If man were to become extinct in South America, the sheep would not survive him half a dozen years. There are three chief reasons for this, and all of them are of peculiar interest. In the first place, the sheep is, as a rule, a timid and defenseless animal, and at the same time is neither swift nor cunning. It falls an easy prey to the meanest of the wolf tribe. A single coyote or a fox terrier dog could destroy a thousand in a few days. Then it is found that the young lambs and critical time, the flock owner will lose them by the hundred. It is a common thing in the Southdowns for the same way that the horse sheds its thick winter coat.

A Seile of Oit London.

One of the most interesting relics of old London is St. John's gate, Clerkenwell, which, because it does not hap-pen to lie in one of the main arteries of the big city, is not so well known, even to Londoners, as it should be. It is the only remaining portion of the important Priory of St. John, which dates from the fourteenth century. The old gateway has a literary interest attached to it, for in the room above the archway Dr. Johnson worked for Cave, the printer, for a small weekly stipend; and the Gentleman's Magazine, which to this day bears a picture of the archway on its cover, was first printed here. The archway had latterly become much defaced and weather worn, but it has recently been restored as a memorial to the dules of Clarence, who was first sub-prior of the Order of St. John. The order as now revived embraces the St. John Ambulance association and is busy mother good works.
