CATERING TO AMERICANS. London Tradesmen Rake in Millions of Our Dollars Every Year.

It is estimated that Americans every year in London distribute nearly twenty-five million dollars among the tradesache. I found the local dentist, with people there. They nearly always pay cash and are charged good prices. Naturally, then, says the New York Advertiser, the London tradesmen have become thoroughly awakened to the importance of catering to this trade, and they are using all manner of means to attract it. In nearly all the shops on the Strand, Regent street, Oxford street and other thoroughfares of that character, where prices are given and articles are displayed in the windows, the United States dollar mark is used in conjunction with the English pound mark. One of the big dry goods stores in Oxford street created quite a commotion among the Americans by displaying a very large American flag from their flagpost. As I happened to pass by I saw about two hundred people looking reverently at the stars and stripes. The size of this crowd not only demonstrated the clever move of the shopkeeper, but the large number of Americans in London, that so many of them could be attracted about the same time and at the same place by this means. Naturally they all wondered what it meant, and went into the shop in pursuit of knowledge. They were given to understand that it was in the nature of a personal compliment, and they feel it now their patriotic duty to believe that this is the greatest shop in London. Other shopkeepers are sure to discover the eleverness of this scheme and follow the example. It may become contagious. If it does, the American flag will be more familiar in Lon-

Among manufacturers, says the Iron Age, small eastings are often put in revolving cylinders with pickers or stars made of east iron, having usually six points, the extremes of which are about an inch apart. They are also familiar to toy dealers, who sell them to children as "jackstones." The pickers, together with small eastings, are put particles of sand adhering may be removed and a better finish given the castings. A large and well-known New England concern, which, in addition to other lines, manufactures serew wrenches largely, formerly used a peculiarly shaped malleable fron ferrule with irregular openings at the two ends weighing about an ounce. Some of these ferrules chanced to be a part of the contents in one of the tumbling barrels. When the barrel was opened the attendant noticed, what to him seemed almost incredible, that the picker with all its prongs was inside the ferrule, the openings of which were comparatively small. The observant mechanic logically concluded that as it had gotten in it could be gotten out again.

The phenomenon was brought to the attention of parties who decided to apply the idea in a puzzle, and the result has been that the original manufacturers are now making the two parts under contract in ton lots, while the first order is said to have notted a profit to the promoters of seventeen hundred dollars. This is known on the streets own and taken up their residence in the as the Trilby puzzle.
