THE Oregonian is a great newspaper—the pride of the Northwest as such—but we think that it shows bad taste in a recent issue by editorially handling the revered names of Garfield and Blaine in a manner not altogether creditable to their memories.

Nervous Prostration.

MRS. DIXON WAS DISCOURAGED AND CARED NOT WHETHER SHE LIVED OR DIED.

But Brighter Days Came, Bringing Hope and Happiness—A Grateful Woman's Narrative.

From the Advocate, Gilroy, Cal. A reporter of the Gilroy (Cal.), Advocate was in conversation today with Mrs. Laura Dixon, an intelligent lady owning one of the most attractive homes in that city.

Incidentally she spoke of her good health, which she recovered in a remarkable way, after years of suffering from nervous prostration, the effect of a long siege of la grippe. For years she had been under the care of physicians and had swallowed innumerable doses of loathsome medicine, from which she had received no apparent benefit.

The different doctors employed gave her no relief, and she finally concluded to dismiss them and try life without their experimental preparations.

"In looking over a newspaper," and we use her own words, "I noticed an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for pale people, for sale by a local druggist. I thought I would try them, and so sent for a fifty-cent box. To my delight I found speedy relief and was encouraged to continue their use; for weak as I was, and reduced in flesh after the sickness of years, I felt confident it would take months before I could hope to get my former health restored.

"My cure was permanent. I have never enjoyed better health than in the past year, and I attribute my present good health to the toning up of my system by the use of Dr. Williams' curative pills. I can heartily recommend these pills to all who may be suffering as I suffered from the prostrating influence of la grippe—the after effects common to many of its victims. I felt assured that if I had known of these pills in time, I could have saved myself the outlay of hundreds of dollars and from the loss of vitality and other losses and inconveniences.

"If you think my testimony about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills would be likely to induce other sufferers to try to get relief from them, I will cheerfully vouch for the truth of this statement."

Subscribed and sworn to, before me this 10th day of June, A. D., 1895. MRS. LAURA DIXON. F. C. STANFORD, Notary Public, In and for Santa Clara county, California. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves.

STATUE TURNED GREEN.

ASTONISHING Transformation in One Night Caused by Acid.

A singular transformation in the appearance of a statue of the great musician, Spohr, that stands in the market place of the town of Cassel, in Hesse-Nassau, Germany, recently caused consternation among the inhabitants of that sleepy little municipality, says the New York World.

The good old burghers, the staid matrons and the frivolous young people all rubbed their eyes. They could hardly believe it, but there was no doubt that the statue had, overnight, turned green. Hitherto the figure had stood in the market place, a stately memorial in bronze.

The Casselites concluded that supernatural means was not an explanation of particular value, and they investigated. It was found that an artful "pretence" boy had been the agent. The statue was dirty and the town officials decided that it needed a thorough cleansing. They gave the job to a painter, and he thought the matter of so little importance that he turned it over to one of his apprentices, with the simple instruction to clean the statue well.

A TERRIBLE GUN. New Cannon That Can Destroy a Ship Ten Miles Distant. Maxim the gunmaker, and Dr. Schupphaus, the gunpowder expert, have invented a new cannon and torpedo powder which will knock all modern war vessels to pieces like eggshells. This big gun will throw a huge cannon ball full of explosives ten miles and when it strikes it will smash into kindling wood everything within hundreds of feet.

The discovery is called "the Maxim-Schupphaus system of throwing aerial torpedoes from guns by means of a special powder which starts the projectile with a low pressure and increases its velocity by keeping the pressures well up throughout the whole length of the gun." Patents on the system have been taken out in the United States and European countries. The special powder employed is almost pure gun-cotton, compounded with such a small per cent of nitroglycerine as to possess none of the disadvantages of nitroglycerine powders, and preserved from decomposition through a slight admixture of urea. It is perfectly safe to handle, and can be beaten with a heavy hammer on an anvil without exploding.

ROAST LIZARD.

A Common Dish Among the Indians of the Mojave Desert. The Digger Indians and the Putes live in the mountains and in the forests on the verge of Death valley. The Putes are known as the white Arabs of the desert. Their staple food is lizard flesh, which they consider a great luxury and which they catch on the borders of the valley. The lizards are about two feet long. The Indians call them "chahowalla" and roast them as caught between hot stones. White men eat them, too, but dress them and boil them over a sagebrush fire. They are said to be very good eating and to taste quite like frogs' legs.

There are no birds in this neighborhood save the weird, mysterious raven, whose ominous voice flits croaks the fatal entrance of those who brave the terrors of the valley. Howling coyotes add their harsh cries to the sum of horrors about the place. Curious reptiles, uncleanly and hideous in appearance, are found here. The most deadly creature next to the Gila monster is what the natives call a "side-winder" snake, which is peculiar to this desolate desert. It is a rattle about twenty inches long, which moves from side to side with a startling spring instead of gliding along. Moreover, it has horns, and I don't know but hoots, too. It is assuredly of the evil one. Scorpions, tarantulas, rats, horned toads and great lizards aid to render Death valley the most appalling place on earth. There are millions, too—my millions which live upon centipedes—and there are rats with huge ears, a sight to scare the dogs.

An Urgent Landlady.

An aged lady complained to a London magistrate that because she was a little behind with her rent her landlady followed her to church and asked for it there. The landlady came into the box alongside her, and when she was joining in the responses was constantly whispering to her about the rent. When it came to the response: "Incline our hearts," the landlady would add: "To pay our rent." The magistrate said it was very annoying, but there was nothing illegal in it.

borrowing from health.

If you have borrowed from health to satisfy the demands of business, if your blood is not getting that constant supply of fat from your food it should have, you must pay back from somewhere, and the somewhere will be from the fat stored up in the body. The sign of this borrowing is thinness; the result, nerve-waste. You need fat to keep the blood in health unless you want to live with no reserve force—live from hand to mouth.
