ON EVEN TERMS.

"You appear to forget that this fellow Vaughan has the reputation of being one of the most desperate criminals that ever stepped. 'King of the Coiners' he is rightly named; but it is chiefly because ne is at the head of a dangerous gang. And because, by a lucky chance, you have found out that he is living in private lodgings under an assumed name, makes it none the less risky for us two alone to attempt his capture.'

It was in a decidedly dissatisfied tone that Mr. Roche, the detective, urged upon his superior officer the hazardous nature of the business they were upon; but Arnold Bond merely smiled good humoredly as he responded:

Whatever risk there may be, Roche, I think I shall face. And as I expect to take our man entirely by surprise, in the very bosom of his family, I don't anticipate much resistance. Still, I am prepared for it, and 1 don't think that he will easily give us the slip. For the rest, you will simply carry out my instructions.

The two detectives knocked at the door of an unpretentious lodging house in a quiet street of the east end

Almost immediately a respectable looking woman opened the door, and, so diligently in the interest of stepping back, said, before Bond could

"Ah, sir; I don't believe they expectnot feel discouraged. As their ed you again to-night; but it's well numbers increase and sphere of you've come, for the poor mite is very bad, they say."

With the ever ready wit of a shrewd truthfully, virtue will triumph detective, quick to take advantage of the slightest error, Bond instantly checked the exclamation of surprise which sprang instinctively to his lips, Judge Denny, of Chiuese pheas- and, stepping in, quietly observed:

"Indeed, I am sorry to hear that. Our usual friend could not come himself, but, as his partner, I thought it ny, though a very ardent supporter advisable to look in again. Let me see-Mrs. Sutton, second floor, is it

The bed was occupied by a little girl of about six years of age, who, it needed no second glance to perceive, was very near to death indeed. She was gazing steadily at her father, who, however, kept his face carefully averted. The pitiful, pleading expression in the sick shild's eye struck the detective to the heart, for it was a look which expressed more eloquently than any words the bitter disappointment she felt at seeing one she evidently dearly loved about to be taken from her this night of all nights. The detective paused abruptly, hesi-tated a moment, and then the resolute expression on his features softened suddenly, and he said in a half jocular tone, to hide the emotion he could not entirely conceal: "Stay, Vaughan; I cannot do it after all. I can't take such a cruel advantage of even you at a time like this!

That's all, and good night."
"Bond! Bond!" eried the king of the coiners, springing forward as he re-covered from his momentary stupefaction: "Heaven prosper you for this! Bad as I am I hope I'll be able to give you your reward for this if it's years

A moment later the detective had gone. He had sacrificed an opportunity of adding enormously to his reputation

It was a year later before the author ities succeeded in discovering the "factory" where Vaughan and his confederates turned out the cleverly made counterfeit coins which had so long been passed with impunity in most quarters of the metropolis.

But after infinite trouble Bond found out all he wanted to know and one night he surrounded with his men the counterfeiter's den.

Bond had got within a few feet of when suddenly and without the slightest warning the whole floor seemed to cave in beneath his feet, and as he threw out his arms with a startled cry the trap he had unconsciously sprung turned completely over, and threw him into a large, well-lighted cellar below. Before he could rise some seven or eight men had seized him, and, smid a storm of oaths and threats, bound him hand and foot, despite his strenuous struggles.

"You fools!" cried Bond, exasperated beyond measure, "let me tell you the game is up! My men surround the place, and the little joke will only make matters a great deal worse for you. You'd better—"

"Joke!" repeated one of the coiners.
