HAULING IN SHAD. A Period of Excitement Among the Fish When the half-circle outlined by the

corks is less than one hundred feet in diameter the interest becomes feverish, and the float is a scene of intense but CURES SCROFULA subdued excitement, says Lippincott's Magazine. Two lines of men, with straining muscles, haul steadily on the hand-lines, suggesting the athletic contest that is called the rope-pull, and even the engine coughs and sputters, as though collecting its energies for the critical moment now approaching. The silence is unbroken, except by the voice of the superintendent giving his orders, and an occasional exclamation, impossible to restrain, from some of the negroes. The water within the net is violently agitated by the thousands of fins and tails beating it into foam. A great sturgeon is thrashing about him furiously, and the hauling is suspended until a man can go out in a boat and spear him. The tug and strain begin again; and now the moment has arrived that will test the strength of knot and the quality of fiber GIVEN AWAY TO INVENTORS. fishing from the shore there was a gradual slope from the middle of the river to the point where the catch was landed, but in float-fishing it is necessary to raise the whole catch along the surface of that inclined plane which slopes to the bottom of the water. In the progress of the catch up this slope St. Paul Kansas City the progress of the catch up this slope the strain on the meshes of the net is tremendous, for the middle of the seine is now practically converted into a great bag full of struggling shad and herring. The flapping prey is in sight, and every muscle is at utmost tension. Foot by foot the seine comes in, and at the moment it reaches the top of the plane the lead-line is held taut, a dozen hands grasp the cork line and draw it

Booth's Experience on a Stage in a Moun tain Side Town.

"I once produced Yorick's skull from a real grave," remarked a Chicago theater man recently. "It was years ago, in Virginia City, Nev., when that was a great mining camp and a stock company was maintained at Piper's opera house on B street. The theater was built-the whole town was on the steep side of Mount Davidson. A street was thirty or forty feet higher than B street, so they had to blast out rock to make a level for the theater. The stage rested square on rock. We got along very well until Booth came there and 'Ham-

Every oyster has a mouth, a heart, a liver, a stomach and other necessary internal organs, including a set of cunningly devised intestines. The mouth is at the small end of the oyster's body, near the hinge of the shell. It is oval in shape, says the St. Louis Republic, and, though not readily discovered by an unpracticed eye, may be easily located by gently pushing a blunt bodkin or similar instrument along the folds of the surface of the body at the place mentioned. Connected with the mouth is the canal which the oyster uses in conveying food to the stomach, from whence it passes into the curious little set of netted and twisted intesningly devised intestines. The mouth little set of netted and twisted intestines referred to in the opening. To discover the heart of an oyster the folds of flesh which oystermen call the "mantle" must be removed. This is fatal to the oyster, of course, but in the interest of science and for the benefit of the "curious" it is occasionally done. When the "mantle" has been removed the heart, shaped like a cres-
