wire guard must cease to prevail. A wire fund accordingly had to be raised for the payment to such farmers as would enter into the arrangement of all expenses connected with letting down the wire during the winter months and replacing it in the spring. English agriculturists being as a class the most good-natured of men, this plan was very largely, though far from entirely, successful; enough of the country was free from the iron impediment to enable men to ride with confidence over large tracts, but there

THE MOON AND CLOUDS. No Perceptible Influence Exercised B tween Them.

It is an old weather saw that the full moon eats clouds. Sir John Herschel put the idea in a more scientific form by suggesting that sufficient heat might be radiated from the surface of the noon to cause the disappearance of douds from the earth's atmosphere when the moon is full, and when, conequently, its radiation toward the handspring with the best of them. No earth is greatest. Humboldt and Artakers. ago did not consider such an opinion to unreasonable, while many sailors, and others practically interested in weather changes, are fully convinced hat the full moon drives away clouds. The proper way to settle such a ques tion is, of course, to notice what actually occurs. This investigation has been ndertaken in England by Mr. S. J. Johnson, who has recently announced the result of observations covering the last fifteen years.
