ABOUT PEDIGREES.

The Divvers, for Example, May Be Vere de Veres in Disguise.

A story in one of the magazines about a woman named Divver, who haunted genealogists and experts in heraldry until she satisfied herself that her family name was De Vere, and immediately adopted that patriotic patronymic, affords no end of amusement to paragraphers as illustrating the height of absurdity in the quest of ancestry, says the Boston Transcript. But may not the worthy Mrs. Divver have been justified in her action? It is very probable that Divver is a plebeian deformity of De Vere, which time, custom, carelessness and indifference to descent brought about. Names suffer just such mutilations and attrition in the course of time, and are ground down to an indistinct sound, losing edge and accent in the process. We once heard of a man who signed his name Simmer without the slightest suspicion that genealogy would have justified him in writing it Seymour. This very beautiful and euphonius name is treated with barbarity by many who bear it, who pronounce it Seemore, utterly oblivious that it comes from St. Maur, in which form it is now written by the duke of Somerset, whose heir is Lord Seymour. This family of Seymours, by writing the name in its ancient and authentic form, and conserving its concentration as Seymour in one of their titles, undoubtedly are moved by the purpose of letting the world know how they would have it pronounced. T..ey are a very old race, associated with St. Maur in Normandy before the Conqueror invaded England. They are as proud as the proudest. When Sir Edward Seymour joined William of Orange at Exeter, the latter said: "I think, Sir Edward, that you are of the family of the duke of Somerset." "Pardon me, sir," said the aristocrat of aristocrats, speaking as the head of the elder branch, "the duke of Somerset is of my family."

If a man or woman in America thinks it worth the time and trouble to trace descent in search of an ancestor it is quite possible that he or she may make a discovery gratifying to family pride. Social lines have been much more closely drawn in Great Britain in the last two centuries than they were in the times of the Plantagenets and the Tudors. It was no uncommon thing four hundred years ago for the sons of nobles to go into trade in association with men who had made their way from very humble beginnings. The sons of country knights were often glad to be taken into the counting houses and households of the rich London merchants. Marriages often followed that united the tradesman's family with old, historic lines. Very kindly relations sprang up between the pal-aces and "the city." Even monarchs did not disdain to mate with ladies of no higher rank than simple gentry Edward IV. married Elizabeth Wood ville, who, though the daughter of a baron, was the widow of a simple knight when the king, who was always taken by a pretty face, met her. The mighty Queen Elizabeth had among her near kinsfolk on her mother's side some good-natured everyday country people who bore the name of Brown, and who, when she came to the throne, visited London in the expectation of nepotism.

The great queen was more Tudor than Brown-by the way, Owen Tudor himself was but a plain Welsh knight who made a lucky marriage-and she sent her country relatives back with an intimation that court life was not their sphere, and with no sinecure to console them. Dr. Doran conjectured that the slang phrase: "Astonishing the Browns," long in vogue in England, may have had its origin in this incident. The Browns were types, for there was many a plain country gentleman who might with genealogical justification "call the king his cousin." All this has changed; caste has hedged itself in within the last two centuries; classes do not mingle so much as they did in the time of the Tudors, which is the best period for Americans to study when in search of ancestors. If a lady or gentleman with a taste for ancestors wants to gratify it, it is only an embittered enemy of the heraldry office who will seek to thwart the endeavor.

AN EXPENSIVE CURL

Origin of a Story Attributed to Twent Handsome Women. Lady Harriet D'Orsay was really, acsording to Mr. Sala, in his reminissences published recently, the heroine of a story which has been told in at least twenty forms of twenty different ladies of fashion. She was presiding at a stall at a vente de charite, or bazaar, held in aid of the fund of some asylum or another, when there came up the duke of Orleans, son and heir o King Louis Philippe. The duke, after some polite small talk, began to extol the beauty of her hair, and, indeed her Henrietta Marie coiffure had never looked glossier and softer than it did this day. "Oh!" said his royal highness, "if I could only possess one of those enchanting ringlets!"

"How much would monseigneur give for one?" asked Lady Harriet, gravely "five thousand francs?" "Five thousand francs!" repeated the duke; "a mere bagatelle." "Six thousand francs?" "Anything so charming a lady chose to ask. "I will not be extortionate," pursued

Lady Harriet; "we will say five thou-

And then she very composedly produced a dainty little pair of scissors, snipped off the adorable Henrietta Maria ringlet, wrapped it in silver paper and handed it with dignity to the duke. His royal highness looked very straight down his nose, and, returning Lady Harriet's salute, stalked somewhat gloomily away. But his privy purse duly forwarded the money next day.—Philadelphia Press.

SOME POINTED QUESTIONS. They Were Put to American Travelers by the Viceroy of China. When Mr. Allen and Mr. Sachtleben reached Tien Tsin, after their long bicycle ride from Constantinople across Asia, they had a protracted interview with the viceroy—Li Hung Chang—the man whom Gen. Grant included among the three greatest statesmen of his day. He asked the young American travelers a multitude of questions about the countries they had ridden through, and at last came down to personalities. The following were a few of his inquiries: "About how much did the trip cost

"Do you expect to get back all or nore than you spent?"

"Will you write a book?" "Did you find any gold or silver de osits on your route?'

"Do you like the Chinese diet?" "How much did one meal cost you?" "How old are you?" "Are you married?"

"What is the trade or profession of our parents?" "Do they own much land?" "Are you democrats or republicans?" "Will you run for any political office in America?" "Do you expect ever to get into con gress?

"Do you have to buy offices in America?" The young men hesitated a little over this last question, and the viceroy was good enough to say that they would become so well known as the result of into office without paying for it. "You are both young," he added, "and may
