SHEA resting annual Operation in New York.

The Official in Charge Has Trouble with New-Fangled Clipper and Sours on the Job-Particulars of the Process.

Every year the sixty odd sheep in Central park are shorn of their heavy winter coats, and the wool is sold by auction to the bighest bidder. The shearing this year was rather more interesting than in former years, says the New York Tribune. It is great fun to watch the perspiring shearers strug- CURES CANCER, gling with the frantic sheep, some of which kick like young steers, and make things lively for those handling them. Some bright man suggested to the park commission that time could be saved, more wool taken off, and less profanity would be provoked if the sheep were sheared by machinery, instead of by hand. Accordingly, a machine, which is of a pattern in general use among farmers, was shipped to the sheepfold at Sixty-sixth street. The shepherd unpacked it and gleefully expatiated upon the trouble and time which would be saved by its use. In appearance it resembles a tricycle, with the unfortunate sheep as a passenger, while the pedals, worked by the operator, actuate the clipping apparatus. The clipper is worked by a flexible shaft, and looks like an ordinary horse clipper. One St. Paul Kansas City man can shear a sheep by hand, but three men are required to do so by machine. The sheep is held in the frame by one man, the pedal is worked by another, while the clipping is done by a third. When all was ready a struggling ewe was brought and firmly held in the wooden frame, while the shepherd. with a determined eye, started the fly wheel humming by a vigorous application of the pedal. The shearer grasped he clipper and applied it to the breast of the unfortunate sheep. Now you'll see the wool fly," said the shepherd, with a wink. What wool did fly was ot off the sheep, but off the trousers f the man holding the animal. Her harp hoofs made his clothes look much he worse for wear in about three sec ends. Meanwhile the machine had ome to a standstill, despite the franic efforts of the shepherd.

"Why don't you pedal, man?" roared he shearer. The shepherd said nothing, but, wiping the drops from his brow, went to San Francisco work and soon had the wheel humming again. As soon as the clipper touched the fleece there was a slight scurry of wool and then the machine came to a dead stop. The shepherd refused to pedal any more, and another man tried it, but soon gave it up. After some caustic remarks it was determined to go back to the old way and shear the sheep by hand. The machine when worked by man power operates very well on country sheep, but the sheep in Central park are of a pure breed. Careful feeding and housing make them grow wool at a rate which would make a Texas sheep farmer open his eyes. The fleeces often run to fourteen pounds in weight and will run through an ordinary fleece as easily as a knife cuts butter, soon gets such as is worn by the Central park

In shearing the Central park sheep much more care is taken than is the case among farmers. The sheep are expected to present a good appearance to giving an even clipping to the coat. oil on the animal's back, and when vigorously rubbed develops a soapy lather. This cleans the skin thoroughly, and when the ewe scrambles out of the munity, says the Chicago Tribune.

trough she is as white as driven snow. The surplus sheep and buck lambs are also sold at auction, together with the wool, and fetch high prices. They are bought by farmers to improve their strain of sheep by infusing high-bred blood. Those in Central park are certainly as fine sheep as one could wish in the gutter. to see, and great pride is taken in them by the park shepherd. He will not indulge them in a machine hair cut and shampoo again, however, so he says, unless he can get a four-horse-power

FRAME HAY STACKER. If Made Property, It Is Said to Be a Very

Handy Device. The frame for stacking hay, shown below, consists of two sills, 2x6 inches. 22 feet long and placed 10 feet apart. Upon these sills rest three frames made of 2x4 timbers 20 feet long for the uprights and joined at the top by means of 2x6-inch boards 8 feet long and braced at each of the upper corners

STACKING HAY FOR WINTER USE. osspiece is suspended a track for a hay fork. Hay is brought up at the end of this frame and by the proper arlifted from the wagons and transferred to the stack, which can be made, of course, as high as the frames. When it is desirable to move this from one portion of the field to another, simply hitch a horse to the end of each sill and pull it wherever desired. Make the sills rounding at one end so it will slip over the ground like a sled. The upright timbers are mortised firmly into the sills, thus making the whole strong and durable. If larger and higher stacks are to be built, the sign of the frame can be varied accordingly. It is a very handy device if made properly, and for those who have a great deal of field stacking to do is worthy of trial.-Farm and Home.

DESPISED BY CATS.

The Magple Is a Foe That Is Feared by the Felines.

The pets of the house were three very large, black cats, great favorites immensely spoiled, and very dignified and lazy. As we regarded the Australian magpie somewhat scornfully dallying with his dinner, we saw one of these solemn black monsters advancing at its usual dignified pace toward him. A cry arose from the assembled family, says the National Review: "Oh, Tigris will kill the magpie." The head of the family desired to wait developments. There was a painful suspense of breath as we watched the shaggy black Persian advancing on the plate and magpie with a steady, unhurried step The magpie stood aside from the plate, and with head well on one side. watched the oncoming robber. There was a world of meaning in the glance of that wicked gray eye, but it was all lost on the dignified composure of the Persian, who without deigning to look at the magpie, proceed to sniff at the contents of the plate.

The bird, motionless as a statue, waited till the black whiskers came inquiringly over the edge of the plate; then he made one sudden hop, lunged once, with a lightning stroke of his beak, at the beautiful glossy black muzzle, and was back again in his watchful attitude so quickly that one almost felt disposed to doubt if he had ever left it. There was no doubt in the mind of the cat. That lightning stroke of the beak had much the same effect on the Persian as if a bomb had burst somewhere in its middle. It leaped with a yell five paces backward, its legs extended, every separate hair of its long fur standing off it at full length. When it reached the ground it hesitated not for a moment; no fleeting notion of vengeance crossed its mind; with head and tail depressed, in manner as unlike as possible to its dignfied approach, it retreated at a good round trot to the shrubbery whence it had come.

A Blunt Man. An intensely reserved man, Ibsen is not at all fond of talking of himself or of his works. At a dinner some time ago the wife of a well-known artist, being seated beside him, insisted on conducting the conversation to that end and finally maintained at length that his "Hedda Gabler" was an impossible woman. "But, madam," he answered, "I draw her from the life." Yes. Herr Doktor, but I am a woman. I should know. I say again that it is impossible that such a woman should exist." This was too much for Herr Doktor; like a flash he turned on her-"Idiot!" he ejaculated, which was naturally the end of that conversation.

A shameful story, a story that ought to be incredible, is printed for truth in Kate Field's Washington: A welldressed young woman recently went to one of the taxidermists of the Smithsonian institution, carrying with her in a cage a bright capary bird. " have hunted all over the city for a bird of just this color." she explained, "because I want him to match a gown I am having made." She wished the tayidermiat to kill it and set it up, that she might wear it as an ornament! Thousands of women wear birds on their hats, the more is the pity; but proba-bly no sivilized woman ever before brught a live bird and killed it. or had it killed, for such a purpose.
