HOWARD'S FIRST CLIENT

He Came on Mighty Particular Bush But It Was Not a Divorce When Representative M. W. Howard, the populist member from Alabama, first hung out his shingle as a lawyer he was 19 years of age. His patience was nearly exhausted by days spent in vain waiting for his first client to come, when one day he heard a knock at the door. On calling "Come in!" a darky, known as Sam, stepped into the little mess."

Mr. Howard, thinking that the man most likely wanted a divorce, said: "Sit down and explain everything carefully."

"'Deed, sah, I would like to close de dore, fo' de bizness am mighty pertikler," said Sam. After having closed the door he took the proffered chair. Then he explained:

I wants you to write a letter to fo' me." "Do you love her?" asked the lawyer. "Do you want to marry her? Does sho love you?" and many questions of a like

To all these questions Sam replied: "Suttingly." The replies being satisfactory, he pro-

De roses am red.
And de vylets bloo;
De pinks am preaty,
And so is you.

And having put it in, Howard asked if that was all. Sam scratched his woolly head a minute and then said: "Boss, dar am one mo' thing dat ought to go in dar-dis: 'I hopes dat you will 'scuse de pore, mizerable writin' and de bad spellin'."—Washington Post.

The Fagot Party. If one has a wide fireplace and a number of friends who are good story-tellers, a fagot party may be a pleasant form of entertainment. Give to each guest a ribbon-tied bundle of fagots or bits of wood, place cozy reats about the fire and ask number one (the ribbons should be numbered) to throw her fuel upon the fire. As it burns a story is to be told, neither longer nor shorter than the time of its burning, and as the light dies out number two begins his tale. A room for a fagot party should be lighted only by candles and the firelight. Finish the evening with an informal dance, if your guests are of the dancing habit, and with a light
