THE CHANGE.

Early in the fall of 1892, when it was supposed that there would be no change in our protective system, Secretary of the Treasury Foster, in making his estimate said that the revenue for the fiscal year 1892, under the tariff then in force, judging from the fact that there had been a continuous increase of revenue up to that time under the tariff of 1890, would be sufficient to meet all expenditures and leave $20,000,000 of surplus. In January, 1893, just before the present democratic administration came into power, Secretary Foster stated before the committee on ways and means, that in view of the threatened change in our economic system he would have to revise his estimate of the fall of 1892, and at that time said that $50,000,000 more would be necessary, after it had been voted to place the democratic party in power. The impending change began to bear its fruits at once. A change to McKinley will bear the fruits of prosperity, but should the democrats attain another lease of power the most dire elected Senator Daniel, of Virginia, consequences will ensue.

PATRIOTISM, protection and prosperity will be the popular campaign cry this year.

Contagious Blood Poison has been appropriately called the curse of mankind. It is the one disease that physicians cannot cure; their mercurial and potash remedies only bottle up the poison in the system, to surely break forth in a more virulent form, resulting in a total wreck of the system.

THE FORMIDABLE UMBRELLA. A French Tragedian Finds It Mightler

Than the Sword. The affection of the collector for the objects of his zeal has been amusingly illustrated by a story told of Melingue, a French tragedian who had a mania for gathering together great quantities of old vestments, arms and similar an tique apparatus. Among his treasures was a beautiful and keen-edged sword which had belonged to Philip II., son of Emperor Charles V.

Having worn this sword in a piece in which he was performing, Melingue was making his way homeward in Paris one night. The weather was rainy, and he carried an umbrella. Under his cloak he bore the precious sword of Philip II.

Coming around a corner, Melingue was suddenly menaced by two sn althieves. He was an expert fencer, and knew that with the sword he could quickly beat the rascals off. But he

"What! Betray to these rascals that I have such a precious possession? No! They might be too much for me, after earth where there is a drug store. ali, and then they would get it. I will keep it out of sight."

So saying, he placed his left hand on the hilt of the sword inside his cloak, and with the other hand let down his umbrella. With this as a weapon, he assaulted the footpads with such force and spirit that he put them to flight. In this case the umbrella turned out to be mightier than the sword.

Something of a Change. A French paper vouches for this dialogue, which took place in a French assize court, as being literally true: "Why," asked the judge of a man who had been eaught stealing provisions, "did you attempt to rob this poor baker? "It was hunger that forced me to it," answered the man. "When the forest wolf is hunted from the woods by ecomes an honest man!"

A curious case of nervous hallucina on is reported in the London Teleraph. At Bordeaux recently a hysteral Frenchman visited the tomb where is beloved was laid. Carrying a lighted andle and kneeling by her coffin, he exlaimed passionately: "Would I could ie! Would I could die!" Just then the ind closed the door and extinguished he light. The bereaved lover who had ust prayed for death rushed for the oor; he could not open it; he tore at knocked, kicked, struggled, calling oudly for help. A young man in blue overalls and a reasy cap and jacket is now employed fireman on the Long Island railroad. le is George D. Pratt, the son of the ite Charles Pratt, the multi-millionaire tandard Oil prince. Young Pratt was raduated from Amberst college with mors in 1893. As one of the repreentatives of his father's estate, who is the second largest stockholder of the Long Island Railroad company, he proposes to learn the railroad business through every grade, from laborer up. He started in the car shops at Morris Park, and after service at the bench, the furge and in the assembling-room, he learned hew to use tools, how every part of a locomotive is made, and how the whole is put together. After having served the requisite apprenticeship in that department, he jumped into the locomotive cab and compensed showoling coal in the capacity of a fireman.

SAVED THE OWNER TROUBLE. Burglar Opened a Safe When the Combination Was Lost.

The proprietor of a large store on High street went to his place of business at an unusually early hour one morning; in fact, the sun had not yet risen when he turned the key in the door. On entering he was surprised to find a man trying to open the door of his safe. He stood and watched him for some time, apparently deeply interested in the proceedings, says the West Bedford (Mass.) Windmill, when finally the burglar swung open the door of the safe with a delighted chuckle, but happening to turn he saw that he was discovered, and became the best physi- very much alarmed. Prescription in a Dead Language. "Why doesn't the doctor write his prescription in English instead of Latin?" asked a man of a druggist, whose reply the New York Herald pub-

In the first place, Latin is a more exact and concise language than English, and being a dead language, does not change, as all living languages do.

Then, again, since a very large part of all drugs in use are botanical, they have in the pharmacopæia the same names that they have in botany-the scientific names. Two-thirds of such drugs haven't any English names, and so couldn't be written in English.

But suppose doctors did write a pre scription in English for an uneducated patient. The patient reads it, thinks he remembers it, and so tries to get it filled from memory the second time. Suppose, for instance, it called for iodide of potassium, and he got it confused with cyanide of potassium. He could safely take ten grains of the first, but one grain of the second would kill

We had a prescription here the other day which we had put up originally, and which had since been stamped by druggists in London, Paris, Berlin, Constantinople, Cairo and Calcutta. What good would an English prescription be in St. Petersburg?

HOW THEY ARE MADE. Facts of Interest Concerning Strings for

Musical Instruments. Although many people play stringed instrumets, few know how the strings for their favorite instruments are produced. The Neapolitan provinces maintain their superiority in the production of this article, which requires the greatest care and dexterity on the part of the workmen. The treble strings are particularly difficult to make, and are produced at Naples, probably because the Neapolitan sheep, from their small size and leanness, afford the best raw material. They are formed from the small intestines, which must be very carefully scraped. The intestines are then steeped in alkaline lyes, clarified with a little alum for four or five days, until well bleached and swollen. They are next drawn through an open brass thimble, and pressed against it with the rail in order to smooth and equal the surface, after which they are washed, spun or twisted, and suiphured during two hours. The strings are finally polished by friction and dried. Sometimes they are sulphured twice or thrice before the finishing process.

QUEEN VICTORIA DRESSED UP.

She Is Then Quite Royal in Appearance, But Otherwise Only Ordinary Queen Victoria, in her best bib and tucker, is still a very good-looking woman. In the hideous bonnets and old-fashioned shawls the queen so constantly wears when not "on exhibition" she gives one the impression of being merely a nice, cozy motherly old lady whose whole life's interest is centered in her family. One would never suspect her of being able to rise to the occasion and look the part of queen. With the assumption of court finery, however, says the Philadelphia Times, Victoria doffs her homely manners and becomes at once the personification of a gracious sovereign.

To those who have seen her in both characters the metamorphosis has seemed little short of a miracle. On account of the queen's lack of height she is rarely photographed standing; for though she scarcely measures five feet, her waist line is abnormally long, so when she is seated she gives one the impression of being a tall woman-an advantage the vanity of any woman, even a queen, would never ignore.

Prisoners have a fair proportion of happy answers" credited to them. Of these, perhaps, the best known are those of the man who, when asked if he pleaded "guilty or not guilty." reed that he couldn't say until he had heard the evidence; and the naive response of the prisoner to the usual question before sentence: "Have you anything to say, prisoner, before sentence is pronounced upon you?" "It's very kind of your honor, and if it's quite agreeable to the court I should like to say 'good evening.' "
