SAVED BY A GLOVE BUTTON. Mements That Were Full of Peril and Seemed Like Hours

How much may depend upon a glove fastening was illustrated at one of the Monson slate quarries in an adventure which the person concerned would not care to repeat, says the Lewiston Journal. He was a derrick man, who stood on the brink of one of the great chasms from which the slate rock is hoisted. His duty was to catch hold of the big hook depending from the end of the boom as it swung over the bank and attach it to the crate to be sent back into the pit. Standing upon the very edge he reached out to catch the hook which dangled near him. It was winter and he wore thick buckskin gloves The hook slipped from him as he leaned out, but caught into the fastening of the glove. The swing of the great boom took him off his feet in an instant and carried him out into the giddy space with his life depending on the glove's holding fast. His whole weight was hung on that button, and there was a clear 175 feet of space between him and the floor of rock below. The moments that passed before the boom could be swung back over the bank seemed like hours to him, but he got there at last, safe and sound. A Kick for Each Name. "Hang Theology" Rogers, the distinguished English philanthropist who died recently at 77, got his nickname from calling out "Hang economics! Hang theology!" at a school board meeting where theoretical questions hindered progress. His independent and energetic character may be inferred from this story of his youthful days: A new boy came to school dressed in a light blue jacket faced with velvet, white trousers and waistcoat, and a turned down collar and frills. Rogers went up to him and asked him his The boy replied: "I am Charles name. Stuart Vane, Viscount Seaham, and my father is the marquis of Londonderry. Whereupon Rogers kicked him three times, once for Vane, once for Seaham, and once for Londonderry.

HIS FATHER'S BUSINESS.

Boy Gave So Many Accounts of It That He Was Cailed a Politician.

When the man who canvasses for names for the city directory knocked at the door on the top floor of a Harlem tenement house it was opened, says the New York World, by a small boy, bright eyed and ragged, with that expression of premature agedness on his face that makes the children of the criminal classes look old enough to be their own fathers. In reply to questions the boy gave the name of his parents. Then came a puzzler.

"What's yer popper's business?" in quired the directory man. "Business?"

"Yes. What does he do for a living?" The boy laughed. "Oh," he said, "he steals lead pipe off roofs, and sometimes he breaks into houses. Say, yer ain't a policeman, are you? Well, that's all right. Popper ain't got no regular waterfront and robs drunken sailors and sometimes he sandbags people. Today he's trying his hand at picking pockets on the Bowery, but I guess he'll get pinched, because he generally does at that game. Don't put him down as a pickpocket, mister, for he's a regular greeny at that."

The directory man scribbled something in a notebook and moved away. The boy called after him curiously: "What did yer put popper down as, mister?" The directory man said nothing, but held up the book, in which was written:

"Jones, John, politician, 19264 Avenue A," and moved off to the next flat. THEY ENJOYED THE JOKE.

The Elephants Appreciated a Good Thing

When They Saw It. A number of years ago, in a book which was called "Leaves from the Life of a Special Correspondent," Mr.O'Shea, the author of the book, gave the following description of an adventure he had with a herd of elephants. Said he: "A young friend asked me once to show him some elephants, and I took him along with me, having first borrowed an apron and filled it with oranges. This he was to carry whilst accompany and was about to begin the distribution again, when I suddenly reflected that if elephant No. 7 in the row saw me that is where the elephant falls short ing me in the stable, but the moment we reached the door the herd set up such a trumpeting-they had scented the fruit-that he dropped the apron and its contents, and scuttled off like a scared rabbit. There were eight elephants, and when I picked up the oranges I found I had twenty-five. I walked deliberately along the line giving one to each. When I got to the extremity of the narrow stable I turned. give two oranges in succession to No. 8 he might imagine he was being cheated. and give me a smack with his trunkof the human being-so I went to the door and began at the beginning as before. Thrice I went along the line. and then I was in a fix. I had one orange left, and I had to get back to the door. Every elephant in the herd had his greedy gaze focussed on that orange. It was as much as my life was worth to give it to any one of them. What was I to do? I held it up conspicuously, coolly peeled it, and ate it myself. It was most amusing to notice the way those elephants nudged each other and shook their ponderous sides. They thoroughly entered into the humor of the thing." Cook Rides a Bike.

A lady living in the upper part of New York wanted a cook who would go been at night, and put an advertisement in the paper setting forth her needs. Among the applicants was a negro woman of huge proportions. The egro woman of huge proportions. The lady looked at the negrous and thought of her little kitchen. She did not want to state the real reason, for fear of giving offense, so she said: "I'm afraid that you would not get here in time in the morning, you live so far downtown." "Don't you fear about that, honey," said the negress; "it won't take me no time to come up on my bike." The lady regrets now that she did not ask this wheelwoman whether she wore bloomers or knickerbockers.

Call It Quits.

Among the advertisements in a German paper there lately appeared the following: "The gentleman who found a purse with money in the Blumenstrasse is requested to forward it to the address of the loser, as he was rec-

A LESSON IN POLITENESS. An Interesting Incident of Eleval

The temptation to correct the man ners of children who are not taught by their parents to conduct themselve properly in public places is very strong. A gentleman yielded to this temptation on a New York elevated car recently under circumstances which may be pardoned to him, though un-doubtedly he exceeded his right.

He was sitting, as he relates in the New York Press, in a car in which all the seats were taken. A stout woman, flashily dressed, sat opposite him, holding a small boy between her knees. As the car stopped, a person who sat next the gentleman got out, and a working girl, carrying a big bundle, came in, and started to take the vacant But the woman with the boy was too quick for her. She pushed the boy quickly into the seat, just before the girl could take it, and looked complacently about her, as if she could not see the girl at all.

The gentleman might then have risen and given the girl his own seat, but he did not. He put his arm around the boy's waist, lifted him to the floor, and

"Now take off your hat, and offer your seat to that young lady." The boy ran to his mother's knees. The girl hesitated, but took the seat as the gentleman beckoned her to it. And then the mother of the child burst out into a violent denunciation of the man's "ungentlemanly" conduct.

"And let me tell you, sir," she said, finally, "don't you ever meddle with people's children again!" "Madam," responded the gentleman "if mothers do not train their sons to grow up as gentlemen, some one else should. How do you expect that boy to respect his mother's sex, when his mother sets him the example of despising other women's claims to courtesy?"

BIRDS AS BAROMETERS. A Well-Known Writer Who Holds That

They Are Not Weather Wise. In his charming book, "Recent Rambles," Dr. Charles C. Abbott gives some little attention to the question whether birds can realize the coming of a storm so far in advance of its actual appearance as to serve observant man as a reliable barometer. Although this has been popularly be-lieved for centuries, Dr. Abbott thinks that it has no basis in fact and voices his opinion in these words:

"It needs but a short ramble in the woods and fields after a summer shower to see how painfully destructive are moderate wind and rain when they rush across the country hand-inhand. There is no more touching sight in all nature than the lowly murmured plaint of nest-birds as they contemplate. after a shower, their ruined home and drowned fledglings.

"To credit a bird with weather-wis dom, and yet with no power to guard against probable danger, is to assume that it leads the terrible life of one in constant fear—a mental condition the bird's daily life flatly contradicts. Never does the world look brighter than a few hours before some great change. Never are the birds more merry, mammals more full of play; yet the impending storm means mischief that to some extent might be averted had these happy creatures but an inking of what was coming.

In hunter's lore there is an idea that the jackal is the lion's provider; that he locates the game and takes the lion to it. This superstition has no more foundation than is found in the fact that after a lion has slain his quarry the jackals always attend and wait the con clusion of the repast, in order to pick o tie loorings
