How They Ply Their Arts in London and Paris.

Extraordinary Robberles Executed Daring Adventurers of Both Sexes-The Champion Hotel Thief of the World.

Hotel-keepers are peculiarly liable to be swindled. So many people of all sorts are constantly coming and going in the busy season that it is next to impossible for the most careful man to be sure beforehand that his guests are The French Academy, speaking ex all honest and straightforward, and cathedra, defines classic authors as will not be found to have skedaddled when the time comes for the little bill to be collected, after they have fared sumptuously for many days. The best the sorely tried landlord can do is to steer, as well as he may, the happy middle course, without offending the solvent by raising suspicions of their solvency beforehand, and watching the doubtful lest they suddenly disappear in the night. And he may be trusted to be pretty sure on the average to make up for his losses by sticking them on to those who do not pay up.

Two well-dressed young fellows, apparently strangers to each other, were given rooms on the same floor of a certain hotel. A day or two later one of them said his trunk had been stolen. and made such an outery that, to get capacity of more than three quarts of rid of him, the unsuspecting landlord paid him the value of his trunk and its contents, amounting to something like £11. The young man left and presntly the other gentleman paid his bill and also took his departure. But in some way the defrauded landlord learned later that when gentleman No. 2 left he took with him not only his own trunk but the one for which No. 1 had been paid, concealed inside it. From Margate there comes a tale of a of flour, and also slicing into Saratoga bold attempt by a "foreign countess" chips. to get the better of a hotel manager. cultural chemist, who discovered that Aware that hotel keepers are liable for leguminous plants absorb nitrogen the property of guests up to a certain from the air by means of micro-organ- amount, irrespective of "negligence," isms on their roots, and thus enrich the the countess, when her bill was prebeen robbed of a valuable silver belt, last a long time and add greatly to the worth more than the amount of her beauty of the room. bill. At both places she had happened to be serving as a housemaid. The countess quickly paid her bill and departed. One of the most extraordinary robberies recorded is the one which was my impure organic matter and act as | exected a short time ago at a hotel in the Rue Sophie Germain, Paris. One afternoon a well-dressed man and woman arrived at the hotel in question and took the best bedroom in the house for one night, paying for it in advance and requesting the waiter to call them at four o'clock the next morning. He did mly on the surface, giving out intense so, and they left at five o'clock. But when the chambermaid went to put the room in order she met with an astoundequal to 30 tons of coal, and costs be- ing sight. The place was nearly bare, and, in fact, every movable article of furniture had disappeared. The visitors, with the aid of accomplices in the streets, had managed to lower all through the window without being per-

The death was recently recorded of a remarkable scamp who must surely have been the champion hotel thief of the world. He rejoiced in the name of Col. William Addison, and is estimated to have in his lifetime departed from 5,000 hotels without leaving any money behind him. His mode of operation was peculiar and ingenious. He had lielleville, about 14 miles away. Mr. his nefarious career in the shape of an devised contrivances for carrying on Addison collapsible trunk and an Addison balloon hand bag. The trunk appeared to be an expensive leather-cov ered affair of large size, which, when contracted, could be carried under the arm like an artists portfolio, while the hand bag could be diminished so as to go into a pocket. Selecting his hotelsaually a high-priced one—the colonel would fill his trunk with bricks and blow out his hand bag with straw and proceed to take up his quarters. At the east indication of impatience on the part of the landlord for payment of his bill the colonel, announcing that he was going to the bank, would pack his trunk in his portfolio and put his bag in his pocket and depart for good. In this way he had lived in luxury for many years, and, consistent to the end, he tied in a hotel and left no money behind him .- London Tit-Bits.
