VARIATIONS IN LITERATURE.

Present Day Literary Imitations of Musical Compositions Common Year Ago

Some twenty-five years ago there was a style of musical composition much in vogue known as "variations," says a writer in the Atlantic Monthly. It appeared in dozen page sheets entitled "Home Sweet Home—with variations." "Coming through the Rye—with variations." "Let Me Kiss Him for His Mother's" (also with variations). The distinctive plan of these compositions—and, whatever their individual characteristics, they were, as a whole, without variation—consisted, first, in a brace or two of banging prelude, closely followed by a simple little air that somebody else had written. This definitely announced the theme to be "variated," which was next heard behind a thin screen of artfully arranged arpeggios. Then it came a deep disguise in the bass, to become barely recognizable in the treble with trills, ditto in bass, and finally lost itself in a company of crashing chords so overpowering that one could not be certain whether the original air had been "Coming through the Rye" or "Let Me Kiss Him for His Mother's."

A similar sort of treatment has now invaded the art of letters; that is to say, it has affected the entire twenty-six, as well as the select seven to be found upon the piano keyboard. It doesn't nowadays satisfy a writer to say, merely: "One summer morning, fine and early, I was walking through the woods." He immediately goes on taking the second "early" as his key-note. The sun had not been long above the horizon and the air was yet fragrant with last night's dew." Then, with "fine" and "summer" as texts, he tells us: "Everywhere were the green and luxuriant footprints of light-stepping summer." Starting next from (1) "I," (2) "walking" and (3) "woods," he informs us: "As my feet pressed the soft moss faint forest odors filled the air, the crackle of a dry stick was heard and a startled gray squirrel scampered up the giant oak on my left." Da capo: "On such a glorious morning I was glad simply to be alive, as were we all—young-risen sun, trees, flowers, moss and little gray squirrel."

And so, diluting and further diluting an idea, it is hard to tell just what degree of strength it may originally have possessed. The strength of the writer, it is, however, more easy to determine.

They All Come Back To Hood's Sarsaparilla

There are facts in medicine as well as in other things," said a busy druggist, "but the most remarkable thing about Hood's Sarsaparilla is that customers who try other remedies all come back to Hood's, and this is why the enormous sales of this great medicine keep up and continue the whole year round, steady."

"Why is it?" "O, simply because Hood's Sarsaparilla has more real curative merit than any medicine I ever sold."

"This is of daily occurrence in almost every drug store. Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured more sickness, and made more happiness through restoration to health than any other medicine."

FACTS ABOUT JUPITER.

Wonderful Figures Fail to Express Enough Concerning the Great Planet.

Our most eminent astronomers do not pretend to give us exact reckonings on the great floating worlds out side of our own solar system, but with- inight astronomical approximation every thing has been reduced to certainty. The kingdom of the solar system is Jupiter, "mighty Jupiter, the colossal giant of all the sun-kissed worlds." His diameter is about 88,000 of our miles, being about eleven times that of our own globe; the circumference 275,000 miles at the equator, which would give the giant a volume exceeding that of the earth by 1,284 times. Were it possible to bring the earth and Jupiter so close together that the distance separating them would be no greater than that which now separates the earth from the moon—about 240,000 miles—what wondrous sight would be in store for the residents of our little globe. "The world of Jupiter would appear to us to have a diameter forty times larger than that of our usual night attendant, and the surface of its disk would occupy a space greater than that of 1,500 full moons. And this giant of the planets is removed from the sun by a distance of 495,000,000 miles; has an orbit of more than 1,000,000,000 miles in extent, and makes a circuit of its celestial track once every 4,332 days. This it will be seen that a year on Jupiter is equal to eleven years on earth, and seven-tenths of a year on the earth, and the surface of the world of Jupiter and its orbit will be approximately measured by this comparison: In order to complete its orbit in the time given above, it must speed around the sun with a velocity of 700,000 miles a day, or a little more than eight miles per second.

WOMAN'S TRUE KINDLINESS.

It is More Natural with Her Than with Man.

Among all nations, women are ever inclined to be cheerful and modest. They do not hesitate, like men, to perform a hospitable or generous action; not haughty, nor arrogant, nor supercilious, but full of courtesy and affection; industrious, economical, ingenious; more virtuous, and performing more good actions than man. I never addressed myself in the language of decency and friendship to a woman, whether civilized or savage, without receiving a decent and friendly answer. In wandering over the barren plains of inhospitable Denmark, through honest Sweden, frozen Lapland, rude and churlish Finland, unprincipled Russia and the widespread regions of the wandering Tartar, if hungry, dry, cold, wet, or sick, woman has ever been friendly to me, and uniformly so and, to add to this virtue, so worthy the appellation of benevolence, these actions have been performed in so free and kind a manner that if I was dry, I drank the sweet draught, and if hungry, ate the coarse morsel with a double relish.

They do not hesitate, like men, to perform a hospitable or generous action; not haughty, nor arrogant, nor supercilious, but full of courtesy and affection; industrious, economical, ingenious; more virtuous, and performing more good actions than man. I never addressed myself in the language of decency and friendship to a woman, whether civilized or savage, without receiving a decent and friendly answer. In wandering over the barren plains of inhospitable Denmark, through honest Sweden, frozen Lapland, rude and churlish Finland, unprincipled Russia and the widespread regions of the wandering Tartar, if hungry, dry, cold, wet, or sick, woman has ever been friendly to me, and uniformly so and, to add to this virtue, so worthy the appellation of benevolence, these actions have been performed in so free and kind a manner that if I was dry, I drank the sweet draught, and if hungry, ate the coarse morsel with a double relish.

Never was a more grievous wrong done the farmers of our country than that so unjustly inflicted during the past three years upon the wool growers. Although among our most useful citizens, their interests have been practically destroyed.

WOMAN'S TRUE KINDLINESS.

It is More Natural with Her Than with Man.

Among all nations, women are ever inclined to be cheerful and modest. They do not hesitate, like men, to perform a hospitable or generous action; not haughty, nor arrogant, nor supercilious, but full of courtesy and affection; industrious, economical, ingenious; more virtuous, and performing more good actions than man. I never addressed myself in the language of decency and friendship to a woman, whether civilized or savage, without receiving a decent and friendly answer.
