

Can't Eat

This is the complaint of thousands at this season. They have no appetite; food does not relish. They need the toning up of the stomach and digestive organs, which a course of Hood's Sarsaparilla will give them. It also purifies and enriches the blood, cures that distress after eating and internal misery only a dyspeptic can know, creates an appetite, overcomes that tired feeling and builds up and sustains the whole physical system. It so promptly and efficiently relieves dyspeptic symptoms and cures nervous headaches, that it seems to have almost "a magic touch."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Ostarb Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Ostarb Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A FRENCH INCIDENT. Cyclist with a Broken Leg Wins a Race. A fatal cycling accident happened recently at Mission LaFitte. Two young Englishmen, F. Morris, the stephenshaw jockey, and F. Davis, first stablesman in the employ of L. Robert, the trainer, had arranged a bicycle race of six kilometers from the Mission LaFitte railway bridge to the Croix de Noailles and back. They had almost completed the race when Morris, who was a little ahead, looked back to see how far Davis was behind, and in doing so hit his machine against the curbstone. The unfortunate rider came to the ground and broke his leg below the knee. Morris, who was following close behind, could not avoid his fallen opponent and was thrown heavily to the ground, where he remained insensible.

Disregarding both his own broken leg and his friend's insensibility to the ground, Morris, in his anxiety to win the race, mounted his bicycle and once reached the winning post, with one foot on the pedal, the other hanging useless on the opposite side. Davis was then carried home, but he died during the night.

McKINLEY SAFE. He Has at Least 264 Electoral Votes—He Has Oregon Too.

Early Tuesday evening reports began to pour in and immediately it became apparent that McKinley had won the victory, and easily at that. At the time of going to press it is known that he has 264 electoral votes and perhaps more.

Yesterday at 1:30, p. m., this office received the following dispatch: Portland, Or., Nov. 5.—Otis Patterson, Heppner, Or.—264 electoral votes for McKinley sure. Possibly more.

SOL HINSON. Hearing a report that adverse news had been received, this office wired that claims had been made that Bryan was elected, on private reports that had been received. The answer came speedily and decisively at 3 p. m.:

Portland, Or., Nov. 5, '96—Otis Patterson, Heppner, Or.—All voted. McKinley has 265 safe electoral votes. Oregon safe. SOL HINSON.

The claim is made that McKinley has over a million votes more than Bryan, therefore receiving the popular as well as the electoral vote.

ECHELES ON THE RESULT. Democratic Party Must Now Be Completely Reorganized.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Controller Echeles, who was at national democratic headquarters, said: "I think the result is just what might have been expected. Whenever the question has been put to the voters, 'Will the American people pay their debts?' it has been decided that they will. If we pay our debts the nation pays its debts. The importance of the result to the business world is that it means the rehabilitation of American credit abroad. This means that investors are willing to put their idle capital in our enterprises.

"This election means the complete reorganization of the democratic party. For a long period of time the democracy has been the haven of refuge for every element of discontent in the country. It had to be reorganized and now is as good a time as any. The democratic politicians will learn from this election that it is better to have the business interests with them than to have the disturbing elements."

AS TO THE HAME BILL. Every Boy Bearing It Should Be Proud of the Title.

There is something cordial and frank about the name of Bill, says the Chicago Record. It is strong and sterling old name, which goes on multiplying itself in a most meritorious manner. A large proportion of the men who bear it are good men, and the reason is simple. Most of the "Williams" are named for some other Williams. It is not assumed that it is possible for any mother to choose that rough old cognomen for her pretty baby unless she does it to honor some particular person. Other things being equal, she would call him Clifford or Adelbert or Reginald. But she remembers Uncle Bill Farnsworth, who was the best and fairest man in White Oak precinct when she was a girl, and so she calls the child for him. Or the father recalls to mind a good, hearty and joyous character of earlier days—some friendly Bill of other times—a righteous man and a good citizen, and he recommends the name of William for the little chap, so as to bring back the memory of that other Bill. Or there are Bills in the family of Bills known to fame.

And now comes the key to it all. These various Bills were all named for other Bills, and the other Bills must have been esteemed good citizens and worthy, else no parent would bestow the name upon that which is next to his heart, his man-child. Whenever you find a man named William, and you will find many of them, you will please remember he was so called because there was a respectable and upright William back of and beyond him, and that other William was named for a further William of goodly sort.

It does not pay to belittle the common, plain name of Bill. Every male bearing that name represents some person, presumably worthy, and if he himself degrades and discredits the name, his punishment will be that no Bills will be called in his honor.

THE LATEST FAD.

Autograph Hats Now the Rage with College Students and Summer Girls.

One of the new fads that started with the Cornell university boys is the fashion of wearing autograph hats. One sees them everywhere, for college men in other colleges have taken it up, and have scattered themselves here and there among the summer girls. The hats are made of white canvas, with stitched brims. Names can be written in ink anywhere on the surface. One of these had several names of well-known men written upon it, among them the man who pulled stroke for the Cornell eight that won such a glorious victory over Pennsylvania, Harvard and Columbia in that memorable boat race at Poughkeepsie.

Sentimental young men collect the names of their sweethearts, though this has its drawbacks, because there is always the chance that the hat girl will want to know all about the other girls whose names she finds written on the hat before hers. The words are usually printed, though script makes a prettier hat and looks less like an advertising device. To see stalwart young college men strolling along with these hats on gives one the impression of one of those impetuous individuals who march up and down upon the business street with a printed placard on their backs to the effect that "a regular dinner can be had at the Blank dairy lunch for 20 cents."

However, the fad is growing, and by fall the white hats will be black.

ACROSS THE SEA.

The Deserted Wife Won the Race by Four Hours.

A race across 2,000 miles of water for a wife was recently ended at Ellis Island. The race was between Mrs. Franz Molineux, a deserted wife, and a young girl, Bertha Neibling, the husband's sweetheart.

The wife won the race by four hours and, incidentally, the erring husband. Molineux had been wealthy in Berlin. He had married the daughter of a rich grain merchant. When he failed in business he quarreled with his wife, for she made some remark about his poverty which angered him. He left her, saying that he would go to America and begin life over again. They were proud and she permitted him to go alone, although in her heart she loved him.

The man came over here and by hard work established himself and in receipt of a good salary. He thought of the woman over in Berlin. She was living with her wealthy father, who was very fond of her. In a spirit of pique the husband sent across the sea for another woman to share the home he had made here at 1860 Lexington avenue.

Mrs. Molineux heard of the other woman and embarked in all haste on the steamer Lahn, bound for New York.

The other one, Bertha Neibling, was a stowaway passenger on the Venetia from Hamburg. The Venetia sailed first, yet the faster Lahn beat her into port by four hours, with Mrs. Molineux in the first cabin.

She had little difficulty in interesting the authorities in her case. Detective Peter Groden found her husband and informed him that a woman was at Ellis Island waiting to see him. Molineux was taken there and the commissioner of immigration asked some very searching questions. Then he dismissed him to another room and talked to Mrs. Molineux. Neither husband nor wife knew of the presence of the other on the island.

They were brought into the same room. The wife at the sight of her husband threw her arms around his neck and fainted.

She recovered opportunely and told him how cruelly she had misunderstood him and that she would willingly share poverty and a crust of bread with him.

No man could resist talk like that. Molineux kissed her on the forehead and vowed he would be true to her to the end of time. So they went to 1860 Lexington avenue together, where they will dwell.

The other woman? The story is practically finished as far as she is concerned. The immigration authorities came to the conclusion that as she had no friends here now and was likely to become a public charge the best thing they could do would be to send her back to Germany.—Chicago Record.

RESTORATION OF OIL WELLS.

An Electric Heater Designed to Cause the Resealed Flow.

The general theory concerning the exhaustion of so many oil wells is that the oil, in passing through the stone, has clogged the porous stones with paraffine in such quantities that the further down the strata and the well ceases to produce. In many cases, says the Age of Steel, the supply in the earth has not given out, but only ceases to flow when the exit is stopped. The stone through which the oil passes is of a very porous nature, and, as the liquid is in a crude state, the thick matter becomes a drugg, settling in the rock near the edges of the bottom of the well. Torpedoes have been used to shatter the stone at the bottom of the well, thus breaking up the clogged matter, but this method is expensive. A new method has been devised in lowering a peculiarly-constructed electric heater into the well.

The heater, which is eight feet long and resembles an iron cartridge, is placed in the bottom of the well and the current regulated so that the heater receives just enough to produce an enormous heat without melting the metal. By this peculiar construction of the carbon-packed chambers the intense heat is radiated about into the rock in all directions. Thus the paraffine and other refuse are softened and melted up so that they run, and when the well is started a fresh flow takes place, just as strong as it did when the well was just sunk.

Always Married.

The story is told of a famous mythologist that he was frequently guilty during his courtship of walking the greater part of a mile with the young lady of his choice without speaking. One evening she took advantage of his absent-mindedness to play him a trick. She slipped her hand from his arm and hurried home a wiser way. He continued to hold his arms in the same position, walked up the steps of her father's house and rang the bell, when, in his astonishment, she herself opened the door. He stared in an incredulous gaze and exclaimed: "Why, G—, how in the world did you get on that side of the door?"

EFFECTIVE MATCHMAKING.

Simple and Direct Method Employed by the Nez Perce Indians.

An old custom was revived by the Nez Perce Indians and their visitors during the celebration on the last Fourth of July, says the Morning Oregonian. The natives of the local tribe are very wealthy people, and there are designing mothers among the aborigines as well as in the different classes of civilized society. The young bucks of the Nez Perce tribe are regarded somewhat like the scions of royalty in matrimonial circles. The maidens from all visiting tribes were brought to Lapwai to find husbands. The customs of the tribes, which were revived for the occasion, were more effective than the Boston man's way.

The marriageable maidens were by common accord quartered in a selected spot in the valley of the Lapwai. At an appointed hour the young men who wanted wives to share their annuities, their homesteads and the affections of their hearts appeared in procession on the hallowed ground. The hour was midnight, and the scene was in a grove of trees made fragrant by the wild flowers, and every heart danced to the music of the rippling waters. The young men marched forth, and none but candidates for matrimony joined the march. They were dressed in their brightest colors, and each carried a white willow cane. As they approached the tents they chanted an Indian chorus that was as doleful as the song of the owl and as sad as the wailing of the winds with their voices. The drumming was deafening to the distant spectators and must have been distracting to the waiting maidens in the tents. At last the singing and the drumming had the desired effect.

The maidens came forth, after a delay just long enough to satisfy that universal emotion of the mind of a woman to drive a lover mad with doubt. There were more men than maidens. The former kept up the march and the music with about. The maidens counter-marched on the line of the same circle, each selecting a husband from the line. The chosen ones hastened to follow their brides away into the darkness. The unfortunate suitors were left to despair.

CIGARETTES OF GREEN TEA.

They Tell Us That They Are Now Smoked in "Society."

The green tea cigarette has arrived, and promises to cause greater ravages than its predecessor, the slender roll of alleged tobacco, which now poisons the air almost everywhere in Asia, Europe and America. The person who first discovered that green tea would smolder, for millions of disordered nerves, stomachs and heads, but is probably too far gone in adoration of the enervating habit to feel any remorse. Already the new fad has taken possession of England; it will soon storm the walls of Paris, and before we can fortify against it here we shall be besieged. It will penetrate the boudoir of the ladies, and even the strait-laced, orthodox public will see no harm in an innocent tea cigarette. But none the less a deadly peril lurks within it.

New areas for the growth of tea are constantly opened up in the east, and the product will be pushed with all the energy of merchants determined to make fortunes. We can even foresee the time when to every pound of tea purchased for legitimate consumption as a cheering and health-giving beverage, the subtle grocer will add the dainty package of tea cigarettes, enveloped in paper covered with pretty Chinese or Ceylonese designs, thus giving the entrance of the demon into the household. There is but one compensating feature in the whole business, and that is that at its worst the tea cigarette can never furnish an et-flevium so stifling as that of the American paper roll with which every office boy deliberately exposes his lungs to partial paralysis daily.

CRANKS PESTER EDISON.

One of Them Walked from Montana to Orange.

"Why, you talk about cranks," said Edison recently at Orange to a New York World reporter; "I have more of them come around here than any man in the country. They come out with all sorts of schemes which they want me to puzzle through. These long-haired fellows, with dandruff on the shoulders of their coats, meander around here in shoals. One of them got in here the other day, and he was a walker, too. He belonged out in Montana and got the idea that he was the first man who ever invented an electric light, and that I had robbed him of it. So he came on here to make me give up half the proceeds, and he walked every foot of the way. You ought to have seen him when he got here.

"Some of the boys saw his trail down stairs and followed him up and told him I wasn't here but out at the mines, and I'll be hanged if he didn't walk there. When he got out there the foreman—'w'd' he'd him—asked him if he hadn't invented the electric light. The man from Montana said he had. Then the foreman told him that I had not invented the electric light, but that it had been invented by Thompson. The Montana man wanted to know where Thompson was right away, and the foreman told him Thompson was down in Lynn, Mass.

"How do you get to Lynn?" asked the man from Montana. The foreman told him the road and he started to tramp down there. I expect any day to hear of his raising the dence there somehow. We have 'em here all the time, but they don't bother me any."

Smoked Before the King.

Li Hung Chang seems to be but a slight respecter of court etiquette, for, we are told, he absolutely broke down the rule of the Belgian court etiquette by the simple process of taking out a long pipe, which, after lighting it to his secretary, who filled and returned it, he smoked with infinite deliberation. One would say a good deal about the occasion admirably, and at once caused cigarettes to be handed round, with the result that Li Hung soon found his position no longer one of "splendid isolation."
