CURIOSITIES OF PLANT LIFE.
Trees That Distill Water, Furnish Light, Change Color, and Catch Fish.
On the Canary Island grows a fountain tree, a tree most needed in some parts of the island, says the San Jose (Cal.) Mercury. It is said that the leaves constantly distill enough water to furnish drink to every living creature in Hiero, nature having provided this remedy for the drought of the island. Every morning, near this part of the island, a cloud or mist arises from the sea, which the winds force against the steep cliff on which the tree grows, and it is from the mist that the tree distills the water.

CATCHING A TARTAR.
The Brave and Effective Resistance of an Intended Victim.
Highway robberies, even under modern name of "hold-ups," which alter nothing of their character, have become decidedly rare in the far northwest; and they are likely to become still rarer if all intended victims make as brave and effective resistance as did a grocer of Rainier, Washington, recently.

RICHEST IN THE WORLD.
District Abandoned as Worthless Now Turning Out Millions.
The Mines of Colorado and Montana Now Yielding Ore That is Making Men Rich—Some of the Famous Plants.
History is repeating itself in Deadwood, as it has done in Colorado and Montana. The life of a mining camp from birth to maturity is at least a question of a century. In the winter of 1874 many a miner plodded his weary way from gulch to gulch and from mountain to mountain amid the breaks of Harney's peak on the limestone ranges, weary, hungry and footsore, but never discouraged, for gold was there in the blossom rock, the float and in the gulches. Not, it is true, in big paying quantities as it was later found in the northern hills at Lead City and in the gulches of that vicinity, but enough to lure men on.

A WORLD'S WONDER.
The Marvelous Accomplishments of Blind and Deaf Helen Keller.
Under Her Many Disadvantages She Masters Speech and Becomes Eloquent—Her Touching Talk in Public.
Finished oratory could not have claimed closer attention from an audience than did the half-blurred, yet happy words which fell from the lips of Helen Keller, the famous deaf and blind girl at Mount Airy a few days ago. Her speech was the crowning event of the proceedings of the American Association to Promote the Teaching of Speech to the Deaf, now holding its summer meeting in the building of the Pennsylvania institution. Clad in a girlish costume, with dark ringlets falling to her shoulders and a bright smile illuminating her face, she took the platform to talk on "The Value of Speech to the Deaf."

THERE ARE TWO SECTS.
Mohammedans Are Divided According to Their Great Form.
Mohammedans divide themselves into two principal sects—Shi'ah and Sunni. The Shi'ahs represent the bulk of the former, the Turks of the latter. The chief points on which they differ are the condition of the soul after death and the succession of caliphs. The Sunni believe that there is one immortal God, whose works are without beginning or end, and that He will be visible to the souls of the blessed; while the Shi'ahs deny the immortality of the soul and maintain that the existent principles of Zoroaster will forever contend for the mastery. With regard to the prophet's successors, the Sunnis claim that the lawful successor of Mohammed was Abu Bekr and after him Omar Osman and Ali (nephew and son-in-law of Mohammed); the Shi'ahs, however, reject the first three and hold that Ali was the only legitimate successor.

THE STORY OF THE SALMON.
Said to Deposit its Eggs in Its Native River.
In the autumn time, and onward to the beginning of the next year, the mother salmon ascends the rivers to deposit her eggs, and thus to secure the continuance of her race. In connection with this periodical visit to the river must be mentioned, says Chamber's Journal, a very curious fact. The idea is entertained very strongly by some authorities that a salmon invariably returns to its native river or that in which it is bred. It has even been asserted by fishermen that, when several rivers enter the sea in one stream (as at Bonar bridge, for example), the salmon bred in each river will pass back into their own water and will avoid the strange streams. The late Frank Buckland, a strong believer in this instinct of the fish, regarded the sense of smell as that which led it to its native river. Perhaps the truth is that for the most part salmon do return to their own river, but the practice and habit are not necessarily invariable. We know the fishes certainly swim great distances along coast lines where they are captured in stake and bag nets, and it may well be the case that now and then a fish will turn into a river that is near, in preference to seeking its own and distant water.

IRON MOULDERS HAD CAREFULLY FEELT THE PULSE.
(Going to start a business here?)
"Going to start a business here?" remarked a man of sallow skin and sleepy eyes to a bright-looking young fellow who sat beside him in a Cottage Grove avenue grip-car, says the Chicago Post. "Yes, I have decided not to go to college," the prospective business man went on to say. "What would you advise me to do?" "Well, you know I am in the iron moulding business. We do all kinds of iron work—make those jockey hitching posts and iron fencing, cast-iron pipes and so forth. The business is all right but just now I would advise a young man to look to go into it. Strike some thing staple—something the people have to have, rain or shine, hard times or good times—then work it for all it's worth. Let me give you a tip, my young friend, on my business. I have found that the first thing that the public begins to economize in when hard times comes is cast-iron lions."

ROUGH ON THE SENTRY.
The Remedy Was All Right, But It Was Given to the Wrong Man.
One of the most amusing stories of the day treats of mistaken philanthropy, according to Tid-Bits. At a certain army post there was a London sentry on duty near the hospital. The surgeon was preparing to go to bed inside, when he was annoyed and alarmed at the sentry's coughing. His experienced ear told him that the man had a severe bronchial affliction needing a strong remedy.

IT IS TRUE.
A Horse's Head Is as Long as a Flour Barrel.
It is probable that at first thought most persons would be inclined to doubt the accuracy of the old saying that a horse's head is as long as a flour barrel. Flour barrels vary somewhat in length. Some are made stouter and shorter, some slender and a little higher, but the average flour barrel is about 29 inches in height.

FOSSIL MEAL.
A New German Product Which Has Many Uses.
A new product, called fossil meal, is being introduced from Germany for preventing the loss of heat from radiating behind with the horses and wagon. At Roy the thwarted highwaymen were turned over to a constable and locked up, and the grocer went on his way to Tacoma.

THE GOLDEN BELT OF THE BLACK HILLS.
The Golden Belt of the Black Hills, according to eminent geologists, extends from Garden City in the northern hills to Harney's peak in the southern, a distance of about 50 miles. The auriferous formation comes to the surface and lies at intervals. On the Holy Terror at the base of Harney's peak it cropped out at the grass roots, and on the Honey-stake properties at Lead City the whole mountain is as they sink. On the 800-foot level has been found 500 feet of solid ore, and a shaft is now being sunk which will be pushed by day and night shifts to a depth of 3,000 feet. This property is conceded to be the best mine in the world.

AN ARTIFICIAL NIAGARA.
England's Scheme to Utilize the Current of the Irish Channel.
England does not propose to be behind the United States in the utilization of natural waterpower for electric lighting and machinery. Since she has no Niagara, she proposes, it is supposed, to make one. The force to be harnessed is that of old ocean itself, says an article in the Boston Traveller.
