Rev. W. H. Henderson, Methodist minister, of Island City, Or., came in on Tuesday morning's train and departed Wednesday for Long Creek where he will locate.

The Gazette must have more patrons for its space in order to live. This paper asks no charity but it does appeal to business men to wake up and do business once more.

Hick Mathews is still at the old stand, next door to the post office, where he is prepared to do anything in his line. Shaving, hair cutting, baths, etc., at popular prices. 11.

On last Wednesday evening Chas. Freeland, who for sometime past has made his home with his brother, E. L. Freeland, of this city, departed for his former home in Portland. Early in the evening he was given a farewell reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Slocum by the choir of the M. E. church, of which he was a member. This was certainly a very pleasant affair in every respect, one of the features being an appropriate lunch of cake, coffee and sandwiches. Mr. Freeland has certainly made many warm friends during his stay here, who entertain for him the best of wishes for a prosperous future.

The wife of Mr. Leonard Wells, of Esot Brimfield, Mass., had been suffering from neuralgia for two days, not being able to sleep or hardly keep still, when Mr. Holden, the merchant there sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and asked that she give it a thorough trial. On meeting Mr. Wells the next day he was told that she was all right, the pain had left her within two hours, and that the bottle of Pain Balm was worth $5.00 if it could not be had for less. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Conser & Brock.

Elder J. W. Jenkins arrived from The Dalles on Wednesday morning to look after the construction of the church building for the Christian church of this city. Work on the building will be begun Monday and pushed right along to completion. Elder Jenkins will preach at the opera house Sunday morning and evening. It is especially desired that all members of the congregation be present.

Last evening the mother of Mrs. John Jenkins, who resides at the latter's home, accidentally slipped and fell to the floor, fracturing the bones of the right wrist and slightly bruising her head. Dr. McFaul was summoned at once when he dressed the injured member and reports the lady as getting along nicely for one of her age, she being past eighty.

Married—At the Hotel Palace last evening, by Rev. E. P. Greene, O. M. Harris, a druggist of Dayton, Yamhill county, Oregon, and Miss Mand M. C. Urban, who formerly resided near Monument. Mr. and Mrs. Harris depart this evening for their home at Dayton where they will be accompanied by the best wishes of the Gazette.

On Thanksgiving day, at the Odd Fellows' building, the Ladies' aid society of the Christian church will serve dinner for the small sum of 25 cents. This will be a genuine Thanksgiving dinner and all should attend, it will be cheaper for you than getting up a dinner at home on that occasion. Remember the place.

One of the best campaign jokes we have yet heard is this: The day before election Mrs. Bryan was introduced to a large crowd as "the next mistress of the White House." An Irishman present belittled out: "And b'Jesus if she is she'll have to elope with McKinley." He proved a true prophet.

The woolgrowers of Grant county will meet at John Day next Monday for the purpose of organizing a woolgrowers' association for the mutual protection of all sheepmen, and to consider the proposition of levying a tax to be used for the extermination of coyotes.

Tomorrow the republicans of Oregon will give Hon. Sol Hirsch a banquet as a recognition of the able manner in which he conducted the republican campaign in this state. The proprietors of the Gazette acknowledge an invitation and regret their inability to attend.

Ed. R. Bishop, successor to The McFarland Mercantile Co., is still on deck, giving great bargains in all lines. The stock must be closed out, and it is surprising how cheap things are. Call on them. Frank McFarland, salesman.

Married—Last Wednesday evening, at the home of the bride's parents in Fendleton, Mr. Wm. Fowler and Miss Ida Welfa, Rev. Chaudler officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Fowler departed for Portland, their future home, on the down train.

Dr. Lannenberg, the oculist, is compelled to remain with a few days longer owing to many unexpected calls at the last moment. Those desiring good work should consult him before he leaves the city.

The plant of the Oregon Cracker Company, of Portland, was entirely destroyed by fire last Monday evening. The origin is a mystery. The loss is about $30,000 which is covered by $10,000 insurance.

After this date the First National bank will close its doors at 3 p. m. on Saturdays instead of the former hour, 4 p. m. Patrons will please note this fact and govern themselves accordingly.

E. J. Bayley, one of John Day's leading merchants, is over from the interior country to dispose of a clip of wool that has been stored in the warehouse here for several months past.

Regular services at the M. E. church next Sunday morning and evening. Morning subject, "The Vocation," evening subject, "In the Beginning." All are invited.

Good advice: Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by Conser & Brock.

Halp and Ora Atkins, sons of J. J. Atkins, are ill, the former with pneumonia and the latter with bilious fever. Both are getting better.

Hon. J. N. Brown leaves on this evening's train to attend the Hirsch banquet tomorrow.

NOT A PATRONAGE BROKER.

Absurd Requests for Positions. Received by Mr. Hanna.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 16.—"I have had all the glory I want out of this campaign, and I am satisfied," said Mark A. Hanna, today, while he was busily engaged in going through an enormous accumulation of correspondence.

The remark was called forth by a letter which the national chairman found in his mail, the writer of which entreated Mr. Hanna as the only man for the secretaryship of the treasury, and said: "If you find the duties of the position too arduous for you, call on me, and I will come and help you."

"Here," continued Mr. Hanna, "is another man whose request I can easily grant; he says: 'Don't appoint anyone to this position until you see me.' Nearly every letter I get nowadays is either a request for an appointment or a contribution of some sort. It's absurd, though, to make the formal requests of me, and I just told a man that I was no patronage broker."

Concerning the national republican headquarters Mr. Hanna said: "The Chicago headquarters will be closed early next week, and Major Dick will come back here. The New York headquarters will probably be kept open until we decide about the permanent national headquarters."

"Where will they be located?" he was asked.

"I am in favor of Washington, myself. Everything will be centered there, but wherever they are, you can depend upon it that active work will be kept up."

The Whole Story

Of the great sales attained and great cures accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla is quickly told. It purifies and enriches the blood, tones the stomach and gives strength and vigor. Disease cannot enter the system fortified by the rich red blood which comes by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hood's Pills cure nausea, sick headache, indigestion, biliousness. All druggists. 25c.

HANNA AND DAVENPORT.

Meeting of the Great Politician and the Oregon Carpetist.

Mark Hanna and Homer Davenport have met, shaken hands and declared all bets off until next time, says the Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republic.

Davenport is the cartoonist who provided the republican chairman with campaign clothing, constructed of dollar-mark plaid, and pictured him as an unclassified animal with distorted, yet recognizable features. After the election Davenport expressed a wish to meet Hanna personally, and on Saturday Secretary Perkins, of the national committee arranged a meeting.

The chairman was not in the secret. Mr. Perkins led the way into Hanna's room and said:

"Mr. Hanna, allow me to introduce you to Mr. Homer Davenport."

Mr. Hanna's face took on a semi-serious expression, as he put out his hand and shook hands, saying:

"So you are the scamp, are you, that's been doing it? Well ain't you ashamed of yourself?"

Then he added: "I admire your genius and execution, but o-a-your conception."

"I don't mind meeting anybody I have ever caricatured," said Davenport, "providing he is a broad-gauged man—but I am afraid of their wives. Women get the idea that it is a personal matter."

"Don't let Mrs. Hanna get her hands on you," laughed the chairman.

"Well, now, Davenport, tell me," said Mr. Hanna, as the pair parted, "what are you going to do now that it's all over, and I'm no longer available material?"

"Going to Europe Wednesday," was the answer. "Going to get a look at parliament and do a little work and rest some."

"God help Gladstone," observed the chairman.

MISS CHICAGO'S BREEZY WAY.

Living Things Up Among the Spiritless Guests at a Hotel.

One morning as we were having a melancholy breakfast as a prelude to a melancholy day, says a writer in the Washington Post, Miss Chicago appeared upon the scene with bright eyes, red cheeks, ribbons flying and feathers nodding.

"Why, how do you do?" cried her cheery young voice. "So glad to see you. Haven't heard a word from you since we crossed on the Victoria to Geneva. What are you doing here? I have come to console a giddy father; an afraid it will be awfully stupid, but come and bowl with me after breakfast and we will talk it over." All this was delivered so rapidly I had no opportunity to interrupt. "Bowl with you, my dear little child?" I asked.

"The alleys have been closed for weeks." "Were closed, you mean," said Miss Chicago. "Now they are open, and I have discovered two little negroes, whom I'm going to dress in red flannel conave suits, who wait to do my bidding. We will bowl at ten, have a Turkish bath at twelve, ride at four, play pool before dinner, and dance afterward."

And it was even so. Every place of amusement connected with the hotel had been closed. Miss Chicago turned the key which unlocked all the doors, and during the rest of my stay at the hotel we had the gayest sort of a time. Everybody was happier because of the presence of this bright young western girl. The invalids smiled when she passed them, the servants rushed to do her bidding; the very animals seemed to know when she was near. I left her house, but I know there was weeping and wailing when she came to take her departure.

Small Fruit Salad.

The salad is made by stripping the fruit from the stalks and piling it high on a dish and sprinkling it over with powdered sugar. This may be done with strawberries, raspberries, currants or any small fruits mixed. After the sugar is well dissolved, cover over all six large tablespoons of wine or brandy, or three tablespoons of liquor, and when the flavor is all that is desired, a little powdered cinnamon should be added. In keeping to this salad, no fruit should be tightly stirred, that wine and sugar should be equally distributed. Any of these fruits can be made into a palatable dish separately or together, as taste dictates.—Boston Globe.

Shoes of the Gait.

Before the Gait was conquered by the Romans they had boots or shoes with soles in which were silver-headed nails. Some of these have been discovered in late years. The latter kind of boots and shoes—the long pointed ones—so familiar in pictures of the 14th century, and others, are more generally known.

Sabbath in Scotland.

Scotland's Sabbath is losing its sanctity. Driving, cycling and golf on Sunday have now been followed by a vote of the Glasgow corporation throwing open the public bath-houses for four hours on Sunday morning.

Cincinnati is worth $18,751,229, and has a debt of $12,247,157.

CHANGES IN IRISH NAMES.

Keely Comes from Coole and Kennedy From Crinedel.

Kiely, or Keely, and sometimes the name is written Cayley, but according to the Boston Post, more correctly O'Keely or O'Kieley, is a name derived from Coole, an individual of the same blood as the O'Donovans of Munster, and is written O'Coole and MacCoole, pronounced like O'Keely and MacKeely. Mac Tire was chief of U-MacCoile at the time of the English invasion of Ireland and, according to old annalists, slew Raymond Le Gros. His name still survives in the name of the village Balle-Mac-Tire, now Castlemary, in County Kerry. The name Keeney, or more correctly written O'Kennedy, is derived from Crinedel or Crinneigh (pronounced Kennedy) the king of Munster and father of Brian Boromha (Brian Boru). The sept of O'Keegan in Irish O'Riagan, O'Gathnigh, anglicized O'Casey, and O'Womey or O'Womey, in Irish O'Uama, are also descended from Donchuan, pronounced like Donagan. The name MacNeill, or McNeill, originated with one of the progenitors of the O'Riagan (now written O'Rourke), prince of Incefiny family. It signifies son of Neill (formerly Neill MacNeill) but has been anglicized to Neilson and Nelson. This name is different from O'Neill, which is derived from Niall of the Nine Hostages, king of Ireland in the fourth century.

Coyle, MacCavmel, MacCawell and Cavmil are derived from Fearach, a brother of Murtagh Mor MacLara (Murta More McGara), the one hundred and thirty-first monarch of Ireland. This Fearach had a son named in Irish Cathmhuill (pronounced Cavmil), whose son took the name MacCathmhuill (signifying son of Cathmhuill). The clan Campbell, of Ireland, had the same common progenitor, and the name is pronounced to the present day Cavmil in many parts of Ireland. The name is derived from the Irish word cath, a battle, and maol, a heap. Cathmhuill is from the same root; so also is the name Cagwell and several other corruptions of the name Cathmhuill. The clan were located in Ulster, where many representatives yet remain. The name Hegarty, O'Hagarty and Haggarty is of Irish origin, and written O'H'Eighcheartaigh (pronounced O'Hagarty). The name Desmond has its origin in the Irish word Des-Mhuminhan (pronounced Desmooan) which was afterward anglicized to Desmond, and means South Munster. Some of the owners of the name have tried to Normanize it into Desmond, Dillon, Le Dillon and Dilmane is traced back in Irish history to an individual named Lochan Dilbhain (Laghan Dilwin) who fled to France in ancient times, and one of whose descendants, Robert Le Dillon, or Dillon, returned with Dermot MacMurrough at the time of the Norman conquest of Ireland. He was afterward given a large territory in Irish Cathmhuill (pronounced Cavmil), which his descendants (Dillon) held until the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The Dillon family have been famous in Irish history for the past three hundred years. A number of them were chiefs of the Irish brigade in the service of France, in which there was a Dillon regiment.

CHINA'S CURSE OF OPIUM.

People Who Become Confirmed Opium Live Ten Years on an Average.

"Seven-tenths of the people of China are opium smokers, and two millions of them die annually from its effects," said a Chinese missionary recently who has spent twenty-two years of his life in the Flowery Kingdom.

"This habit is rapidly growing," he went on. "It is confined to no class or sex, but men and women, officials and coolies, use it alike. As soon as opium smoking becomes a confirmed habit with a Chinese coolie he knows that he has about ten years to live. That seems to be the average. I consider it easier to reform a sot in the gutter, one of your lowest type of drunkards, than an opium smoker. Place them behind iron bars, if you like, and after being imprisoned a short time they begin to beg and plead for opium. They rave like maniacs and their sufferings are terrible to behold. They act like wild men."

"The opium vice is ruining China. The people know it and the government knows it, but they take no action. In twenty-two years it has increased fifty per cent. Fertile fields that were once used in the cultivation of rice are now growing the opium weed. The provinces in northern China, where the terrible famine occurred a few years ago and where thousands perished for want of food, had been for years given over to the production of opium instead of food grains. When food was short the people found they could not live on opium, so they starved to death."

"A parallel to the suffering during that famine is hardly equalled by any event in the history of the world. Human beings died in the streets of villages and on the roads. People turned cannibals. Some dug up roots and others were found on the roadside where they had died biting the bark of the trees. The dead were not buried, for the living had all they could do to take care of themselves."

"Now today rice is one-third higher in price than it was a score of years ago, because the crop has fallen off. Opium shops are everywhere. You may be traveling along with your chair coolie when the first thing you know he will put you down and leave you sitting in the streets while he goes in to take a smoke."

A WONDERFUL NEW STAR.

Suddenly Increased in Brilliance Sixteenfold, and Then Faded Out.

The romance of astronomy is well illustrated in an article by Edward S. Holden, director of the Lick observatory, in the Forum. Mr. Holden describes the queer antics of a new star discovered last year, which resembles our sun and which in two days increased in brilliancy sixteenfold and then gradually went out.

Such phenomena as this star has presented, says he, are of the extreme value to astronomers and physicists. By the study of exceptional cases old laws are tried and new ones discovered. Apparent exceptions "prove" (if e. test) the rule. Such cases are also of the greatest popular interest since they throw a light on the past and on the future of the solar system. The Nova was, no doubt, a star like our sun. It was, no doubt, very distant from the earth, since its original luster made it at least as faint as the ninth magnitude. The catastrophe which we saw occurred in December, 1901, was announced to us by light which reached us then, but this light must have left the star twenty, perhaps fifty, years earlier. This recent event is, in fact, ancient history. Let us imagine what fate ours will be, if our sun should suddenly increase in light and heat some hundreds of times, and then fall off some thousands. Every vestige of life on our earth would be extinguished; and the only sign of it to the universe at large would be that a small star-our sun—had gone through a remarkable cycle of changes.

PRODUCES NO GREAT MEN.

Paris Draws on the French Provinces for Most of Her Needs.

The city of Paris with its environs boasts nearly one-twelfth of the total population of France, yet, according to the New York Evening Post, it does not escape the charge, which lies against so many other large cities, of being a huge maw into which the best of the national life is sucked. Only in the slightest degree is it the parent of the energy and distinction which it displays on so great a scale. In the political field scarcely one of the distinguished men of the time is Paris born. The president of the republic is not, nor is the president of the senate or of the chamber; not one of the ten cabinet ministers, neither of the chief justices nor of the attorneys general of the higher courts reckon Paris as his birthplace, nor does the governor of the bank of France. Somewhat similar results are obtained by scanning the lists of distinguished scholars, artists, journalists, soldiers. From the provinces have come a disproportionate majority of the men whose success in life makes Paris famous. Such facts are more striking in the case of the French capital, whose preponderance over the rest of the country has been so long established, than they would be in a newer country, where the headlong rush to the cities is a comparatively new thing.

At Athletic Games.

The new governor of British Guiana, Sir Augustus Hemming, who is about to pass through the United States en route to Georgetown, is especially celebrated in England as a cricketer, being renowned as one of the oldest and most successful of amateur players, a rival, indeed, of Lord Alfred Lytton. He is one of the founders of the Sports' club in London, and has only just resigned the presidency of its committee in consequence of his departure from England. His principal associate in the founding of this renowned institution was the late Sir John Astley, popularly known as "The Mac." Sir Augustus is likewise an expert knight of the wheel, and, in spite of his mature years, remains to-day what he was 25 years ago—a typical, clean-built athlete.—N. Y. Times.

Had a Thousand Lives.

To have saved over 1,000 lives is a somewhat unique experience. The second belongs to Capt. Wales, of the steamship Heligan King, to whom a proclamation was made in Newcastle, England, recently. It has been his good luck to pick up several vessels in distress at sea, including the liner Palmyra, with 250 people on board.—Detroit Free Press.
