A MAN OF FEW WORDS. The Novel Expedient of a Dun-Ridder

He was a man of few words and fewer dollars, says the Chicago Post. He didn't like to be disturbed, and he Dogs in Beltham Sheet Have Sents, in didn't like to enter into lengthy explanation. When a man came in, took a seat beside his desk and asked if he could settle that little account it wearied him to say: "Really, I'm sorry, but I haven't got the money to-day." And when the man suggested that it had been running a long time it wearied him still more to have to say: "Yes, I know it, but I have been very short. I'll try to have something for you next week." There was too much chance for a man to get pressing and annoy him by stringing out the interview. He tried keeping away from the office at the hour his creditors usually came, but they changed the hours of their calls, and he was still bothered and annoyed by their importunities just when he was busiest. Then he hit upon a brilliant scheme, He put in a day puttering around his deak arranging things, and the following morning was ready when the first creditor arrived. He never looked up from his work as the creditor began: ly away without finishing the sentence. He even forgot to ask when he should makes them leave the sooner. His only mistake has been when a man entered hurriedly and began: "Would you He pulled the placard into

ROLL | DESIGNATION OF

SOME STRANGE SEEDS.

To Be Exhibited at the Cotton States Fair.

An Interesting Collection Gathered from All Parts of the Globe by the Agricultural Department of the Exposition.

Queer seeds will be an .nteresting feature of the exhibit of the department of agriculture at the Atlanta exposition. Among those shown will be various kinds employed for food by the parched, pulverized and made into a palatable gruel. Their fondoess for the seeds of some pines is well known, these "pinions" being to them what sugar plums are to white people. Sunflower seeds, too, they parch, grind and make into cakes, which are said to be equal to corn bread. From the same seeds they get oil for anointing their bodies. Seeds of many kinds, according to the Washington Star, have been found in the ruins of the ancient cliff dwellers ould you-" He simply pulled a of Utah, the evidence being satisfacstring and a placard appeared which tory that they were used for food, read: "No!" Grape seeds, gourd seeds and acorns

The exhibit described will include a the famous Calabar bean, which is said to be worse than strychnine. The bean is used by the natives for an ordeal. If a person is suspected of a crime he is compelled to eat one, being judged to be guilty in case of death, which is almost inevitable. Another interesting seed, employed for a like purpose, is that of the "ordeal tree" of Madagascar. It is said to be the most deadly of all vegetable products.

One of the seeds, about the size of an almond, will kill twenty men. The local name of the plant is "tanghinia." Yet another seed, alleged to be poisonous, is that of the common cockle, which, finding its way into wheat fields, poisons the bread made from the wheat. It is the bane of millers in the northwest

> A Hermit for Thirty Years. In a little clearing surrounded by a heavy woods on the banks of Clifty, about five miles from Greensburg, Ind., realdes Frank Doggett. He is now more than sixty years old. When a young man be and his intended wife started to a minister's home to get marran away and throw the young woman against a stoom, killing her almost instantly. He never afterward cared to appear in public and sought this secluded spot in which to spend the remainder of his days. In thirty years, this queer old man has never shaved or cut his hair except at long intervals. Doggett is a strong man, six feet high, land, raising his own food. From a pair of goats he obtains his milk and part of his food supply. He takes no papers and has no reading matter in house. He goes to town when there is an election, and taxes to pay, but seldom speaks to those he meets. He keeps no record of time, performs. about the same amount of labor each day, and is never known to have taken a holiday.

A city-bred, tenement-bred youngster took his first excursion into the country with a "fresh-air" party, says the New York Tribune. It happened to be at the time of the full moon. Night after night the little fellow went out after supper and sat upon a stone behind the farmhouse, and watched the wondrous orb as it rose behind the trees. Then his week expired, and he went back to his tenement district. A year passed, and as it happened the freshair fund sent the same susceptible boy to the same farmhouse. Supper was eaten, and he slipped out behind the house and made straight for the stone Indians of North America. The latter in the back yard. But where was the eat the seeds of certain eacti, which are moon? He looked and looked, till finally, not in the east, but in the west, he discovered a slim silver crescent. The disappointment was too much for him, and he returned to the house weeping. "Oh, it isn't the same feller!" he said. "It isn't the same feller we had last year!"

The Early Man.

Speculations as to the early condition of the first men and women are by no means pleasant ones. There were no words expressive of love or hate. simply coughings, splutterings, hiss-We did not stand erect, but crouched. The legs were without any calf. If the Ainu is taken as a type, we were covered with short hair, which, it is believed, ran into shades of red. Foreheads were low and protruded, mouths mere muzzles, and the teeth were like fangs. Ears ran to points, and there were no lobes at the base.

A Community of Wives.

In Ashantee no man is ever allowed to see one of the king's wives, and should he happen, through accident, to get a glimpse of one of the "sacred creatures" he is forthwith put to death. The law of that country allows the king to have three thousand three hundred and thirty-three "helpmeets" and collection of poisonous seeds, such as no more. These wives all live on two long streets in the city of Coomasie, the Ashantee capital, the quarters occupied by them being locally known by a word signifying "heaven."

DISEASES OF THE SKIN.

The intense itching and smarting incident to eczenia, tetter, salt-rheum, and other diseases of the skin is instantly allayed by applying Chamberlain's Eye and Skin Ointment. Many very bad cases have been permanently cured by it. It is equally efficient for itching piles and a favorite remedy for sore nipples; chapped hands, chil-blains, frost bites, and chronic sore eyes. For sale by druggists at 25 cents per box.
