To those who are familiar with the doings of the recent legislature it was no surprise when appointed Hon. H. W. Corbett, president of the First National Bank of Portland, to succeed Hon. John H. Mitchell as senator from Oregon. Indeed this was expected. Mr. Corbett put a large sum of money into the corruption fund, variously estimated to be from $80,000 to $100,000. It is said that it required $30,000 alone to handle one state senator, who lives not a thousand miles from Multnomah county, on the first day of the joint convention, preventing the election of a senator by the legislature. Mr. Corbett, though totally unfit for the position of senator being palsied from old age, must be rewarded. But will he receive it?

This case disposes of the argument that the Oregon fiasco has no parallel. The Oregon legislature could have elected a senator, even though neither house were permanently organized, and failing to do so, it stands legally in the same position as the Washington case, if the opinion of the best constitutional lawyers of our country is worth anything.
