PREPARING PRESCRIPTIONS.

Doctors Request Druggists Not to Repeat on Them.

The Practice Might Be Regarded as Wrongful, But the Doctors Think It Perfectly Legitimate-Druggists Differ.

People who are predisposed to frequent attacks of slight indisposition of an ordinary nature, and who have been in the habit of having their ailment prescribed for by a physician, will look with askance upon the methods adopted by a number of physicians of late of instructing the druggist who fills the pre-scription not to refill the prescription without an order from the physician. This arbitrary ruling is in the nature of a mild form of highway robbery when viewed from the standpoint of the patient, but from the physician's point of view it is merely a legitimate method of adding to his professional income.

This rule, which happily has been adopted by only a small percentage of reputable physicians in the city, has many obnoxious features, while it has few good points to recommend it to

One of the many objections made to it is the fact that it works a hardship upon the poorer class of patients, who comprise by far the largest proportion of the clientele of the medical profession. A large number of the patients who call upon the members of the medical profession are suffering from only a slight indisposition, which, while it may be chronic, is, at the same time, not of a serious nature, and one which a prescription calling for a simple remedy will either cure entirely or temporarily relieve the sufferer. In such cases, where relief is obtained through the prescription given by the physician, the patient, upon a return of a similar attack, would naturally desire to have the efficacious remedy refilled by the druggist without calling upon the physician again. With this rule adopted by the physicians, however, he would be unable to obtain the remedy a second time before obtaining a prescription from the physician, and paying another fee, unless the druggist saw fit to disregard the request made by the physician. It will be seen from this statement of facts that the real motive for the action taken by these physicians in asking druggists not to refill one of their prescriptions or to give a duplicate to a customer lies in the fact that it will add materially to their incomes. The physicians themselves, however, deny that they are actuated by such a mercenary motive, and claim that their purpose is to prevent the possibility of any their patients coming to harm by reason of having a prescription refilled which may contain some powerful poison. Very often, they say, they write prescriptions which contain a poisonous ingredient which if taken oftener than prescribed would seriously endanger the lives of their patients. It is to prevent any such contingencies that they have taken these precautions.

Without the cooperation of the druggists, however, these orders of the physicians not to refill any of their prescriptions would be unsuccessful. While a very small proportion of the druggists about town express themselves in favor of obeying the instructions of physicians in this regard, by far the majority of them admit that they disregard them on every occasion, except in those in stances in which they know that the prescriptions asked for by their custom ers contain a dangerous poison. The druggists generally argue that a prescription which one of their customers has paid a physician to secure belongs to the customer, and that if he wishes to secure a duplicate or to have it refilled he has a perfect right to do so. Many of the druggists say that even if the physicians gave them orders to refuse a duplicate prescription they would ignore it.—St. Louis Republic.

For 1897 GREAT SERIALS SEVEN

McClure's Magazine

A New Life of Grant by Hamlin Garland. The first authoritative and adequate Life of Grant ever published. (Begins in December.)

Rudyard Kipling's first American serial, "Captains Courageous," (Begun in November.) Robert Louis Stevenson's "St. Ives." The only novel of Stevenson's still unpublished (Segins in May.)

Charles A. Dana. "Recollections of War Time." Mr. Dana was for three of the most critical years of the Civil War practically a member of Lincoln's Cabinet, and is probably better fitted than any other man living to give an authoritative history of this period from his recollections and correspondence.

Portraits of Great Americans. Many of them unpublished. In connection with this series of portraits it is intended to publish special biographical studies under the general title of MAKERS OF THE UNION from Washington to Lincoln.

Pictures of Palestine. Specially taken under the editor's direction. Stories of Adventure. A serial by CONAN DOYLE, in which he will use his extraordinary talent for mystery and ingenuity which have, in the "Sherlock Holmes" stories, given him a place beside Poe and Gaboriau.

TEN FAMOUS WRITERS

IAN MACLAREN. All the fiction that he will write during the coming year, with the exception of two contributions to another publication which were engaged from him long ago, will appear in McClurg's Magazing.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS. A series of new animal stories in the same field as the "Bre Rabbit" and the "Little Mr. Thimblefinger" stories. RUDYARD KIPLING. Besides "Captains Courageous," Kipling will contribute to McClure's all of the short stories he will write during the coming year. Former Heppperite Gets Into Trouble at Salem-Two Other Young Men Under Sometime during Tuesday night or Wednesday morning, says the Salam Statesman, the room lately occupied by the Mascot saloon was entered surreptitiously and a quantity of liquor, stored of Police Dilley last evening started on a bunt for the tellow. He found his man standing at the rear door of a house of logg caught sight of the marshal he evidently suspected the officer's mission. for he started on a run for Liberty street and dashed down that thoroughfare, evidently intending to get out of the city. Chief Dilley started in hot persuit, but was unable to overtake the young fellow. He, however, chased the fugitive through several streets to the river bank at the foot of Union street, where Kellogg disappeared, and the most diligent search failed to reveal his whereabouts.

The chief was covered from head to foot with a beautiful coating of mud. ac a result of his chase, but none the less determined to arrest Kellogg and make him face his accusers. This was done at a late hour last night when Kellogg and several other young men were arrested upon the charge of burglarizing the saloon. Their examinations will probably be held today. The correspondent of the Oregonian says in the Saturday issue, under date of the 19th inst, William Dawne, Samnel Minner and Gibson McFadden today had a preliminary examination before Recorder Edes on the charge of robbery in a saloon. They were bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $250. Mo-Fadden furnished bonds, and the other two were remanded to jail.

Young Dawne, or Kellogg, as he is sometimes called, being the stepson of this, and if innocent that be will have no difficulty in proving himself so.

KIPLING'S LITTLE JOKE.

Rudyard Kipling is usually represented as being very cold and distant to young newspaper men, and proof against their efforts to interview him. There is evidently a kind side to his nature, however, as is shown by a story that is told by the Literary Digest. In regard to the statement in an Australian paper that he landed on that island at 12 o'clock and 16 minutes later "had formulated an Australian policy," Mr. Kipling, according to the Digest, makes the following explanation: "A young reporter cornered me just after I landed. I treated him kindly, but said firmly that I was not to be interviewed. 'I have not thought of interviewing you,' replied the reporter, with a sadness in his voice. 'I ask a much greater favor than that.' It turned out that the reporter had an Australian policy which he knew would be of the greatest benefit to the country. No paper would print it. His modest request was that Kipling would let him There is no patent on put forth his theory as the scheme of the novelist. They will print it, he said, 'if I give it as coming from you.' 'All right,' agreed Kipling, 'fire ahead.' So the young reporter got in four mortal columns telling the people of Australia how to govern their country. I never read the article,' Mr. Kipling placidly says, 'but there must have been amazing theories in it from the storm.it was preaching in Belfast, when a young man in the congregation, getting weary of the sermon, looked repeatedly at his watch. Just as he was in the act of examining his timepiece for the fourth or fifth time, the paster, with great earnestness, was urging the truth upon the conscience of his hearers. "Young man," said be, " how is it with you? Whereupon the young man with the gold repeater bawled out, in the hearing of nearly the whole congregation: "A quarter past eight." As may be supposed, the gravity of the assembly was very much disturbed by the congresse,

An Unexpected Answer. On a recent Sunday night a minister
