Terrible Suffering Occasioned by the Drought.

Ceylonese in Chicago Tells of the Miseries of the Poor Buddhists-Contagion and Starvation Are Bife.

"The present drought in India is one of the most severe ever known," said Mr. Vincent L. Tissera recently.

"I am from Ceylon and know what the horrors of a femine resulting from drought are. Ten or 12 years ago the Ceylonese were the victims of a comparatively mild water famine, but the suffering I witnessed then wrung my heart and I can see as plain as though I were in the country the agony of the have not given the truth in its pitiful of the Hindoos for the Russians. "America has spent millions of dollars in sending and maintaining miswhen the Americans, and the churches tions. Aid from America would do more know and God knows how woefully they are in need of it now.

"A car load of husks would be received with the joy of a people who have been living on roots that the drought has spared. Millions of people have no other food and knowing the likely results of such diet they still must eat. Leprosy is the outcome in many cases, but what will not a starving man do? Think of your own aretic explorers who resorted to cannibalism But leprosy, though the most dreaded disease and a common one in India, is not the most prevalent or fatal of the ills that come from root diet and impure water. A plague called in the native tongue 'burbonic' fever, something like yellow fever, carries off thousands. I hear daily that it has begun its ravages to add to the horror of starvation and poverty. One day 800 died of it, but it has not begun to do its worst vet."

Mr. Tissera is a Cevlonese. At the time of the world's fair he came to America in charge of the agricultural products of Ceylon.
