Thinking it was the work of a fox, he made search and found the burrow, with a large black hen and two more partridges at its mouth. Suspecting there were young partridges in the row, he made up his mind to return and dig them out, as the town of Haddam pays a bounty of two dollars a

It was five days before he had chance to do this, and when he dug out the burrow with the assistance of Sherm Fowler he found that the wily mother fox had removed. They were determined to have that bounty, and incidentally the foxes, and after a long search they found a new burrow, picking up two more partridges on the way. On digging out this new hole they took out eight partridges, three rabbits and a very large woodchuck, with five young foxes in the end. The partridges were partly eaten. but the wodchuck was completely cleaned out, nothing but the skin being left.

Sportsmen have long claimed that foxes were more destructive to game than all the hunters, and have noted a great increase of foxes in towns that have not paid a bounty for the last few years. The only incentive the farmers' boys have for killing the fox is the bounty money. Eight partridges in a burrow but four days old show the great destructiveness of foxes.

VENEER PRODUCTION.

iome Woods Can Be Sawed as Thin as Writing Paper. While the finer and thinner veneers of costly woods are sliced tangentially self. from the side of the log, there are woods that cannot be cut this way-no amount of boiling or steaming rendering it possible to cut them without breaking down the tissues to such an extent as to destroy their surfaces for polishing-while others, says Hardwood, becoming discolored from steaming or boiling, and being too hard to cut otherwise, have to be sawed. The fine-toothed, thin-gauge circular, with flanged center, is the favorite for cutting all ordinary veneers thicker than 30 to the inch; 20 to the inch is the thickness most commonly used for cabinet work and finishing, but much thinner is used in the case of rare and costly woods, or rare abnormal or accidental figures, as in the case of burls. Some woods have to be cut much thicker, being unable to bear handling when too thin; genuine ebony, the only fine really jet-black wood known, and large enough to be of any use, will not stand sawing much below one-fourth of an inch in thickness, owing to the extreme brittleness or want of cohesion, but handled in large sheets. Other woods there are that will lose their fine color on exposure to the atmosphere, espe-SAMPLE COPIES SENT FREE, cially a smoky one; these are cut only when immediately wanted, and are DO YOU WANT THE kept covered until the finishers can put on a protective coat of some prepara-

ANIMAL WARFARE.

Monkeys of Africa Depend Upon Their

The conditions of the life of the monkey in Africa are sufficiently curious without reference to their acquired habits, though these are undoubtedly due to the dangers to which the nature of the country in which they live exposes them. The different species of baboons, which are found commonly over the whole African continent, are all by nature dwellers in the open country. They find their food on the ground, and whether this be insects or vegetables, it is usually in places which afford little shelter or protection. Though strong and well armed with teeth, they are slow animals, with little of the monkey agility when on the ground, and not particularly active even when elimbing among rocks. In a rocky "kopjes" of the south, says the Spectator, of the cliffs and river sides of Abyssinia and the Nile tributaries, they are safe enough. But they often abandon these entirely to invade the low country. During the Abyssinian expedition conducted by Lord Na-pier of Magdala they regularly camped near our cantonments on the coast and stole the grain on which the cavalry horses and transport animals were fed. When on expeditions of this kind they often leave their strongholds for days together, and the means of joint defease from enemies in the open country are then carefully organized. Their natural enemies when thus exposed are the leopard, the lion, and the southern Africa and Cape wild dogs. To the attack of the leopard they oppose numbers and discipline.

SUCIETY IN GAUTEMALA

and especially a young man, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat, possesses about as much attractiveness from a standpoint of amusement as would a residence in a graveyard. There is absolutely nothing to do except work, sleep and eat. The only place a man has to go when he has finished work is to a saloon, and there he has nothing to you are-well, a lucky voyager, that is do for recreation but drink. The door to the best society is shut in the face of Americans-'gringoes,' as they are called by the haughty dons-no matter what their standing. Of course, when one has official dignity he is invited to the president's ball and other official functions, and has entree into society, tercourse in its American sense. Nobody is allowed to see a young lady unless it is in the presence of her entire family under the watchful eye of her duenna, and there isn't much pleasure in this kind of a visit to most young men of America. Guatemala City has travelers do in steamships. Billousness, a population of 80,000, but has no theaters. There was an opera company of fair character there two years ago, but there have been no attractions at all of this kind during the past season. Living is very high in Guatemala City, and salaries are by no means correspondingly high. I would not advise any young man to go there with the idea of making his fortune. There has been too much immigration to the country as it is.

The lost one was dearer to her, however, both because it was prettier and beause it was given to her. Her theory is that the watch and pendant chain dropped from her belt into one of the elevator buckets of tomatoes, was carried to the filler, and went through the filler to the can.
