FANCIES OF SICK PEOPLE.

Patients Have Queer Whims That Canno Always Be Indulged. About the manner of serving their food patients sometimes have curious fancies. In one case a woman flatly refused to take her beef tea unless the bread which accompanied it was cut in the shape of diamonds, while in another it is always necessary to serve the food in a blue bowl, for out of nothing else whatever would she take nourishment. A boy who was attacked with scarlet fever showed great disinclination to take his food, but finally agreed to swal low what was necessary, provided he vas fed in the following way: The beef tea, or whatever was to be given im, was put into a silver teapot, the spout was placed in his mouth, and in this manner the food was poured down

An elderly gentleman who spent much of his time in hunting in Africa on being asked if he fancied any particular dish, replied that he would like bit of elephant's foot. Isolated Communities. And as to the tendency of the growth of great cities to enervate nations, there indulgence which sometimes, but by tator. But where the honest working class far outnumber the proletariat, where the middle classes of distributors and manufacturers and professional men are laborious and energetic, and even the class that lives on its accumulated wealth contains a considerable sprinkling of serious and disinterested workers, we do not believe that there is the smallest evidence of any greater danger in the life of the agricultural village or the pastoral tribe. Indeed, we should regard Olive Schreiner's picture of the life of the modern Boers as indicating norbid elements, with its almost complete absence of any stirring or active intelligence, than any kind of modern life that is honestly laborious at all. The Boer life is too sleepy, too destitute of stirring thought or effort, to be altogether natural. It needs at least the old element of danger and necessary vigilance to render it even bracing.

FEW BIRDS OF PARADISE.

They Have Been Nearly All Destroyed to Supply the Millinery Trade. The bird of paradise most used in millinery is obtained from the Papuan islands and New Guinea, says a writer in Nature. Mr. Wallace, in describing the Paradisea apoda, says: "From each side of the body, beneath the wings, springs a dense tuft of long and delicate plumes, sometimes two feet in length, of the most golden-orange color, and very glossy, but changing toward the tips into a pale brown. This tuft of plumes can be clevated and spread out at pleasure, so as almost to conceal the body of the bird." Julea Forest bitterly deplores the destruction which has been going on during the last decade. He emphasizes the fact that it is no longer possible to procure such perfect specimens as were common ten years ago, since the unfortunate birds are so hunted that hone of them are alowed to live long enough to reach full maturity, the full plumage of the per head more than Brown. They demale bird requiring several years for livered them at Heppner this week, its development. He further states that birds which now flood the Paris market are for the most part young ones, still clothed in their first plumage, which lacks the brilliancy displayed in the older bird, and are conrequently of small commercial value." the English and Dutch governments to

The common sense of every thoughtful woman must at once tell her that Warren's drng store. no comparatively rare tropical species such as the bird of paradise, can long on, will soon place one of the most beautiful desizens of our earth in the same category as the great auk and the dode.

OPCOATS PAWNED IN SUMMER Thrifty and Thriftiess Alike Find the Scheme Satisfactory. "Twenty thousand overcoats have been taken out of pawn during the past week," said a pawnbroker to a Chicago Times-Herald reporter. "The cooler weather has forced us to unlock our cedar chests and undo the bundles which have been packed away in cam phor. During the next month, unless the weather becomes warmer, as many more overcoats will be taken from the pawnshops. "No, it is not because they are por erty-stricken that so many men have overcoats in pawn during the summer. All did summer months than his unnecessary remarkably well and the leading char- overcoat. At the same time many of the overcoats are left with us merely that they may be protected against the moths, who thrive during the summer, and to prevent them from accumulating dust as they would while lying in closets. A man can pawn his over coat for two dollars, and have it with us until he needs it in the fall, and it costs him but 50 cents.

"Of course it is a good deal of trouble for us, but we are able to make it pay us well, and the temptation to a man who is improvident is to borrow more than a nominal sum on his coat, and, of course, he has to pay more in-

"A great many dress suits are also pawned each summer to preserve them antil needed in October. They are worn very little in the summer, and the same reason that leads to the pawning of overcoats operates in their case."

QUAKER OF THE ORIENT.

The Herculean Turkish Porter Whos Place of Business Is on the Street. The Turkish porter is one of the most interesting objects seen in a tour of the orient. Of Herculean strength and power of endurance, he is usually prompt and obliging, also honest so far as in him lies. He cannot speak the truth, and would not respect himself if he could, for that is a virtue of the Frank.

His place of business, says the Chicago Times-Herald, is on the streets of his native town, where he can be found at all hours of the day, clad in a loose soiled jacket, usually gray, with gray gaiters. Turkish shoes or sandals, the inevitable fez and a neckerchief that makes him look as if he were strang-

All the burden of conveying large or small articles falls upon him and he will for a gratuity carry a piano as easily as a trunk. He is the most contented of the working fraternity one meets abroad, whether he is found in the streets of Constantinople or in those of Stamboul, and the tourists make much of him because he is interesting, his occasional smoke under the shade of a mulberry tree, or his lazy sips of sherbet, being treats that renew his strength for the hard work by which he must live-if he is not able to sell merchandise. Being sturdy and industrious, the traits of the Turkish porter commend him to the public, hence a picturesque description of him by one traveler who named him the "Quaker of the Orient." TROUBLED WITH INSOMNIA.

A Drummer Tells of a Bad Case-Why He Quit the Farm. "Was I ever troubled with insomnia?" exclaimed the Chicago drummer, in reply to the question of an acquaintance, relates the Detroit Free Press. "Only one season, when I was about 18 years old, but that was enough. Don't care for any more of it in mine, thank you." "Do you mean to assert that you had the Insomnia at the early age of 18?" demanded the other. "Didn't assert anything of the kind. I said I was troubled with insomnia not that I had it. The porty who had it was an old farmer for whom I was working at that time, and he had the queerest and also the most persistent and malignant case of it I ever heard of. Couldn't sleep mornings after four o'clock, and he used to get out under my window and begin splitting wood and singing like a whole camp meeting. "No use trying to sleep after that, so used to take the hint and get up and go to work. "Then evenings his insomnia would come on again so he couldn't get to sleep, and to kill time he would take a lantern and go out to the barn and thrash grain of husk corn until about midnight, and .. course I was expected to go along and keep my end up. "Well, things kept on in this way until that insomnia of his came plaguey near wrecking my constitution, and then I collected my back pay and quit. That was my last experience on a farm Keeping awake 19 hours a day, not to mention the hard work, was a trifle more than I could stand, so I decided to get out and go into some business where I wouldn't have to hang around the premises and help sit up nights with employer's insomnia, in case he happened to have it. That's why I like traveling-my boss can have insomn's or fits, or anything he likes, and I won't know a thing about it until I come to draw my month's salary."

CRIMINAL LINES.

Man's Character Cannot Always Be Discorned in His Face.

"I used to be a strong believer in physiognomy," said R. C. Ridley to a Washington Star writer, "but have lost some of my foith in it as a science. In fact, a man's surroundings have very much to do with the character shown by his face. I had an illustration of this coming into Washington. When we left Chicago I noticed a group of men two or three seats in front of me, but paid no attention to them particularly, but after we had gone about 50 miles I saw that one of them was handcuffed. He was well-dressed, and at first I thought he did not look like a criminal, but soon saw lines that betokened cunning dupliity and a lack of morality generally. became so interested that my gaze attracted the attention of one of the officers having him in charge, and he said: You seem to be studying the man I have there. Did you ever see him before? I told him I had not, but I was a physiognomist, and was studying the criminal lines in the face. He prevailed upon me to make a report on the man's character, which was greeted with laughter from the prisoner as well as the officers. Then they explained that he onged to the officer, and the key being lost, could not get them off. Then the criminal lines in the face all disup-
