SUCCESS OF THREE SISTERS.

Open a Lunch Reom. The city of Cincinnati possesses a by practical common sense. Twelve ears ago the Misses Stewart, three young women who had been reared in wealth, were by business failures thrown upon their own resources. They secured a room in a business block and established a lunch-room, where they made a specialty of home cookery. Most of the work they did with their own hands, and the excellence of their supplies soon created a demand. The little lunch-room became a success, and at the end of five years, when the great Chamber of Commerce building was put up and there was to be a large restaurant connected with it, the Misses Stewart boldly applied for it. They were backed by many of the best business men of the city, who had known them in their days of wealth and been impressed by their ability as business women. Their bid was accepted, the Misses Stewart assumed charge of the "Glencairn" lunch-room, and have conducted it without a break or a failure for the last seven years.

The clientele is very large. For rent and services alone the yearly expenses are $10,000. The prices charged for food are very reasonable, yet the sisters not only paid all expenses, but live in comfort and are becoming wealthy. They have never lost social position by going into business, and during their entire career have never had to borrow

POISONED AIR.

What Produces Discomfort in a Crowded A very important investigation into he nature of the substances contained in air expired by human beings, says the London Graphic, has just been completed by two prominent men of science in America, Dr. J. S. Billings and Dr. S. Weir Mitchell. As a result of their extended researches they declare that "the discomfort produced by crowded, ill-ventilated rooms, in persons not accustomed to them, is not due to the excess of carbonic acid, nor to bacteria, nor in most cases to dust of any kind. The two great causes of such discomfort, though not the only ones, are excessive temperatures and unpleasant odors." But though the air actually expired by healthy men and animals contains no more poisonous substances than carbonic acid gas. experiments on the air in inhabited dren sequitted themselves. rooms and hospital wards are said to tamination is the minute particles of dusts, in which there are micro-organisms, and it seems probable that these are the only really dangerous elements in the air. These views, and the conclusion that the presence of carbonic acid gas is not a trustworthy criterion of the existence of other and more poisonous exhalations, are likely to be questioned by many students of ventilaive Californians. Jerry Lynch has finally learned the unnel trick. He took it in two dosesone on one evening and the other the next. The senator sauntered up to the Bohemian club the other day and saw two or three of the younger members attempting a new feat, and he watched them with interest. One of them, says the San Francisco News Letter, stuck a funnel in the top of his trousers, threw price of the subscription. his head back, placed a 50-cent piece on his forehead and tried to drop it in the funnel by slowly lowering his head. After all had falled Jerry insisted on trying it, though all had tried to dissuade him from attempting a feat too difficult for them. The funnel was placed in the waistband of his tronsers and he threw back his head to receive the coin on his expansive brow. At that juncture a pitcher of ice water was emptied into the funnel, and by the time Jerry got through dancing the okers had vanished. The senator's emper improved with dry miment and the next night at the club he started in to show a couple of friends the funnel

"It's this way," he explained, "you put the funnel in the top of your pantaons, so, then throw your head back, so, and-wow!" Again Jerry was forced to change his raiment, and he is not showing people what he knows about the funnel trick.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

Lowell Admired the Gentus in It More Than the Moral. It was the opinion of James Russell Lowell, says Charles Dudley Warner, in the Atlantic, that the anti-slavery element in Uncle Tom and Dred stood in the way of a full appreciation, at least in her own country, of the remarkable genius of Mrs. Stowe, Writing in 1859, he said: "From my habits and the tendency of my studies I cannot help looking at things purely from an aeathetic point of view, and what I valued in Uncle Tom was the genius, and not the moral." This had been his impression when he read the book in Paris, long after the whirl of excitement produced by its publication had subsided, and far removed by distance from local influences. Subsequently, in a review, he wrote: "We felt then, and we believe now, that the secret of Mrs. Stowe's power lay in that same genius by which the great succeases in creative literature have always been achieved—the genius that instinctively goes to the organic elements of human pature, whether under s white skin or a black, and which disregards as trivial the conventions and fictitious notions which make so large a part both of our thinking and feel ing. * * The erestive faculty of Mrs. Stowe, like that of Cervantes in Don Quixote,' and of Fielding in 'Joseph Andrews, overpowered the narrow specialty of her design, and expanded a local and temporary theme with the cosmopolitanism of genius."
