ANYBODY CAN AFFORD A GRAVE Mexican Cemetery in Which a Resting

Place Can Be Had at Small Cost. A correspondent of the Boston Traveler describes the queer cemetery of the Mexican city of Guanajuato. There is hardly room in Guanajuato for the living, so it behooves the people to exercises rigid economy in the disposition of her dead. The burial place is on the top of a steep hill, which overlooks the city and consists of area inclosed points, by what appears from the outside to be a high wall, but which discovers itself from within to be a receptacle for bodies, which are piaced in tiers, much as the confines of their native valleys compel them to live. Each apartment in the wall is large enough to admit one coffin, and is rented for $1 per month. The poor people are buried in the ground without the formality of a coffin, though one is usually rented in which the body is conveyed to the grave. As there are not graves enough to go round, whenever a new one is needed a previous tenant must be disturbed, and this likewise happens when a tenant's rent is not promptly paid in advance. The body is then removed from its place in the mausoleum or exhumed, as the case may be, and the bones are thrown into the basement be-

Tossed on the Posming Billows. You may never have been, but if you ross the Atlantic, no matter how smooth the watery expanse, without sea sickness you are-well, a lucky voyager, that is all. Old tars who have spent their lives on the ocean waves, who were almost born, so to speak, with their "sea legs on," suffer now and then from sea sickness in very tempestuous weather. Sea captains, tourists, commercial trayelers and yatchemen say that their is no finer safeguard against nauses than Hostetters Stomach Bitters, and it has been equally reliable as a preventive by invalids who travel by steambost and railroad, and who sometimes suffer as much in those conveyances as ocean travelers do in steamships. Warren's drug store.

A Question Often Out of Place and Un Beccasary. The old hymn in Sam Taylor's 'Original Poems" beginning with "Who Ran to Help Me When I Fell?" ought to have a provisional clause added to it. The person who hastens to help a sufferer who has been shocked by a fall should not say a single word. Of course, says the Philadelphia Record, the benovelent bystander is brimful of questions: "Where are you hurt?"

Have you sprained your ankle?" and lastly the insane request to know whether you can fall down a flight of 20 steps or from a piazza ten feet above ground and not be damaged any more than if you had thrown yourself on a down pillow only a foot away! Of course you are hurt; and the nerve shock is so great that any sort of question, even if "they" shall fetch hot water, is an additional blow to the nervous system. You are suffering, perhaps, too much to speak; yet they pelt you with questions while every power of your body is endeavoring to regain selfcontrol. You ought not to answer. You would like to scream that "it burts" a hundred times more for being summoned to speak and to diagnose yourself. All instructions in the line of "First aid to the injured" should begin with: "Be perfectly silent when you run to lift or help a person who has fallen and is still partly dazed with the tremendous shock." Let it be for the sufferer to say: "Oh, my head!" or "Oh, my leg, or back!" He will indicate as soon as it is necessary the injured part; but meanwhile you are driving him nearly frantic by asking about it. These simple yet important directions do not seem to be impressed upon the average helpful mind. Tact, of all things, is as necessary as a knowledge of a tourniquet made from a stick and course, is required for all bruises and sprains; but let it be brought without asking. The relief to the victim of an accident in having swift and noiseless helpers about him or her-absolutely silent, yet knowing exactly what to dois very great. Anyone who "has been there" knows it all. Yet how quickly is it forgotten when we run to lift up somebody else, and begin to pelt him with: "Where did it hurt you?" "Are you hurt?

LEAVE THEIR NIGHTGOWNS.

Guests at Hotels Sometimes Forget an Interesting Garment. There was a whirr of bells, and the annunciator behind the desk told the night clerk something was wanted in room 319. A little black boy darted up from the bench before the night clerk could call "Front." The boy glanced at the indicator and plunged upstairs. In about four minutes he came down grinning and fronted the night clerk, says the Chicago Post.

"Well?" "Gent in 319 wants a nightgown." "Well, go get him one."

The darkey's grin vanished and his yes were big with surprise. Then the night clerk told him to go to the housekeeper's room and get a nightgown for "Do you keep an assortment of night dresses for your guests?" asked a boarder who had known the house ten said the night clerk. "You see, about every day some man leaves his nightgown in his room. Women rarely do. If we know where the man has gone we let him know he left it, and awai his orders. If he is a regular patror we wash the garment and keep it till he comes back. But many times we know nothing of him beyond what the register tells us. And so every week we have about half a dozen gowns left on our hands. "Convention time always brings bundle of them. We must have collected a hundred while the democratic convention was in town. "What do we do with them finally, when no owner turns up? Oh, go ask the housekeeper."

WORDS PEOPLE SPEAK.

The Educated Person Who Talks English Well Uses About Two Thousand. Few people realize bow limited are heir vocabularies, despite the many thousands of words in the English language, says the New York Journal It is said that a person of education generally gets along very comfortably with a vocabulary of less than 2,000 different words. On the other hand, uneducated people manage to express their ideas all their lives with the use of times. A recent experiment proves how ap our minds are to run in grooves. Twenty-five men and 25 women students in a psychology class were bidden to write down at full speed 100 words, all chosen words there were only 1,266 which oc curred but once, 3,000 of the remainder being repetitions of 75% words. Of the 1,266 written only once, 746 were set down by the men, against 520 by the women. Of the 353 articles of dress enumerated, 224 were found in the womfood they claimed 179. Clearly they were not new women or their range would have been wider.

OUR DAILY BREAD. The Kind Most Common Now Was Un known Last Century.

Much rye bread was eaten in this country in the beginning of the century. and much rye and Indian-a healthful compound that disappeared when stoves superseded the huge brick oven in which the maize ingredient was rendered digestible by being cooked all night. The lowy wheaten loaf, as the staple bread of the land, dates only back to the cultivation of the wheat fields of New York in the early part of this century; and simultaneously there seems to arise a "fashion" of white bread. The using of bread made from anything less than "the best Genesee flour" was thought a mark of poverty. About 1840 there apor poison it with blue mass; but aid Na peared about an even distribution of dyspepsia throughout the northern and enstern states, more especially among 'those well-to-do people who used only the "best Genesse." A curious exhibit is made at the Mechanics' fair. It is nothing more nor less than a display of "mummified" plants. It requires a label to inform the people that they are dead, says the Boston Transcript, for the plants appear exactly as if alive and growing. They are not made of wax, or of cloth, out are genuine plants that have grown in the earth until they have reached a good state of development, when, by their being treated to a certain injection, the growth is arrested. Then comes the strange part, for the plants so treated do not droop and die, the leaves remain fresh and bright, and the plant stands erect. It is, moreover, impervious to heat and cold, and nothing seems able to destroy its strange epose. The most striking part of the exhibit is a collection of large palms used for decorating. These plants are noted for being very tender and susceptible to almost every influence. Those on exhibition have been dead for six months, yet not even when the leaves are carefully examined would promises to create much interest
