LOOKS LIKE A BEAR.

Diminutive Animal That You Can Find in Water.

He really looks very much like a bear, though you must put him under a powerful microscope to see the resem-blance, says Tid-Bits. The extraordinary thing, however, about this tiny creature is that he is found in the gutters of houses, where he is at one time dry as dust and scorched by the blazing sun, at another active and full of life under a refreshing shower of rain. The water bear is one of the Rotifer animalcules, and is of all of them the most capable of standing any extremes of temperature without giving up the ghost. He may be left dried up for months, even years, and yet on being put into water will expand and begin moving about and feeding vigorously. Although he cannot stand boiling water, he will live in dry heat at a far higher temperature, even up to 260 deg. Fahrenheit. One has actually been kept in vacuum for 30 days with sulphuric acid and chloride of calcium without losing his capability of revivi-As for the reason why, it seems the little beasts' bodies are chiefly composed of albumen, which, it is well known, will stand a very high temperature without losing its solubility. Then, too, they are provided with two skins one over the other, and these skins are wonderfully tough and elastic. The water bear has the scientific name of Tardigrada, because he takes life so easy. He is always fat and plump, and spends his waking periods in constantly grubbing with his four pair of legs among whatever rubbish comes in his way. Having eyes, brain and a nervous system, he is much ahead of his tribe, and is altogether one of the most interesting and amusing little animals known to science.

the Century: "School out" at the village school of Burg is a pretty sight. The substantial brick building overlooks the ever murmuring highway, and the boys and girls, instead of stringing up a dusty road, tumble into punts and pole away for dear life-the boys much like other boys, but the girls reduced to facsimiles of their mothers and elder sisters, clad in bright but short raiment and visible afar off through their strange mob caps with wings. As one moves down the stream from Burg by Leipe to Lubbenau these wings grow smaller and collapse, while the skirts grow longer and more resemble the ordinary dress of women. At a dance the Spreewalder knows instantly, by the peculiarities of her costume, from what village a woman or girl has come. At Leipe the multitudinous skirts of alarming girth are no more. The gown reaches the ankles, and the cap fits close to the head instead of resting on a fromework as in Burg. Thus the dress in Leipe is perhaps more graceful, but it is more commonplace. It no longer testifies to that pride of the peasant father or husband which is shown by the number of yards in the skirts of his woman folk and the variety of their caps, by the richness of their dress a well as their jewelry.

The irregulars are, admittedly, the most numerons, but they are in a very undesirable state of no-discipline. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will soon remedy this want in a disordered liver or bowels. Bilionsness manifests itself in yellowness of the skin and eyeballs, sour breath, furred tongue, morning nauses, discomfort in the vicinity of the liver, vertigo and sick beadache. Hosts of people suffer thus. These signs of insubordination to the governance of health, together with an irregular condition of the bowels, are soon regulated by the Bitters, which also overcomes malaria, dyspepsia, rheumatism, neural gis, nervousness and kidney trouble. As a means of checking premature decay hastening convalescence, and mitigating the infirmities of age, the great topic is without a parallel.

COLONIAL RUINS IN GEORGIA. Some Strange Reminders of an An cient Settlement. Near the town of Lexington, in the eastern part of Georgia, are located some of the most interesting and historic ruins that are to be found in the south. The pen of the historian has failed to record the adventures of those to whose handiwork these remains of ancient fortifications are attributable, and the story of the ancient settlement has only been preserved in the tradiof independence, six men and their families dwelling in Wyoming valley, in the colony of Pennsylvania, gathered together their effects and with their families started on a long journey toward the south. They were Scotch Presbyterians, and, not being in touch with their Quaker neighbors in Penn's colony, they decided to try their fortunes in the wilds of the lands of the Cherokees.

Through Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina they took their way. and not until they had crossed the Savannah river and were beyond the jurisdiction of the lords proprietors of the colonies of the Carolinas did they make a halt within the borders of the vast and fertile territory claimed by the Cherokees. The Indians had at that time become involved in a quarrel with the white colonists at Savannah, and a desultory warfare was going on which deterred the travelers from proceeding further southward. They selected the highest hill in all that section as a coign of vantage, where they constructed at first a rude blockhouse, surrounded by a tall palisade, and then cleared the slopes of the trees and underbrush so the savage foe could not approach within bowshot without being discovered.

The corner stones of the old fort still remain in their places, huge flint bowlders that supported the rugged walls, the stones of which are scattered on the barren hill slopes around the old settlement. Upon the mossy gravestones are rudely inscribed the names of various members of the six original families. Newton, Richards, Baldwin, Landrum, Martin and Gilham. Many are of the valiant pioneers have been handed down from sire to son. Were they collected they would make an entertaining addition to the history -N. Y. Post.

Veneer Used for Wrapping. Wood veneer is used to some extent for doing up bundles, instead of paper. Curtain pole manufacturers, for instance, when shipping or delivering poles in small lots wrap them up in veneer. It costs a little more than paper, but not much, and it is much better for the purpose. Poles thus wrapped up are less likely to be creased by the cords tied around them, and the veneer is a better protection from bruises in handling. The veneer used for this pur pose is usually of elm wood and made in the same factories where the poles are made. Veneer is also used for wrapping up picture mouldings .- N. Y. Sun.

DON'T FEEL PAIN.

a Great Protection. Nearly everybody knows that the Kaffir has an extra skin beyond the number apportioned to the white man, and the fact of this additional cuticle may account for the extraordinary insensibility of this race to physical pain. The following facts are vouched for by a writer as being absolutely correct: In a smithy near Bloemfontein one afternoon some one noticed a strong and pungent smell as of flesh burning. On inquiry being made it was discovered that a stout Kaffir boy was standing barefooted on a red-hot horseshoe which had somehow fallen on the ground. Strange as it may seem he and, although an enormous blister was soon raised, he averred that he felt no

All black men have the reputation of owning thick skulls, but what will be thought of the Kaffir who fell from second-story window, about 15 feet, bumping his head on the ground as he brushed the dust from his hair and pursued his way, laughing at the incident?

Another instance of this extraordimary insensibility to suffering comes from a cycle maker's shop in Johannesburg. A Kaffir, in the course of his work, had the whole of his forefinger nail on the right hand torn off by the machinery. In an instant he plunged taining boiling alum and bore the pain day or two later the finger was painless, and the nail soon grew again. But have made the ordinary white man lose consciousness did nothing more in the case of the Kaffir than elicit a grin of pain.-Cincinnati Enquirer.

Some suggestive details concerning the early education of the German emperors have recently been made known. It seems that William II. had in early childhood a tutor who was a captain of the guards. Prince Bismarck had recommended him, and he applied to the heir to the throne the principle on which he had trained his recruits, "bend or break." The young Hohenzollern was made to rise at 5:30 every morning. and at once begin a course of gymnastic exercises unsuitable for a child of his age. It is this regimen, authorities say, which made Prince William so weak and nervous that his grandfather, the old emperor, suggested one day to Bismarck that his captain of the guard would perhaps better return to his re-
