aid to Be the Tallest and Strongest Man John Moriarty, known all over eastrn Maine as "Barney Kelley's Giant," died in Oldtown hospital recently of typhoid fever, says the Lewiston Even-ng Journal. He has been for nearly wo years employed as construction hand on the Bangor & Aroostook railroad, and later on the new Ashland branch, where he became sick.

Moriarty stood 6 feet 9% inches in is stocking feet, and generally veighed 240 pounds. Had he been fat ais weight would have been enormous. But he was very lean. "Why," said Barney Kelley, "you could feed the giant on porterhouse steak and eggs and he wouldn't gain a pound; but he was an awful tough man!"

His arms were very long and he had strength was immense. He could do as on that account his services were always in demand at more than common wages. He was especially serviceable as a derrick man-he could turn the heavy crank all day without tiring. An ax was like a toy in his hands, a cant-dog like a walking-stick. Curious things sometimes happen in the gold bearing regions of the northwest. The Blackfoot (Idaho) News tells of a somewhat remarkable experience which occurred to a blacksmith at that

The smith, whose name is Farmer, had in his shop a grindstone which he wished to "taper off." For this purpose a small stone was requisite. So he went out of doors and made search for a stone of the ight size and shape.

He found one somewhat smaller than hen's egg, and returning to his shop began to smooth down the edge of the crindstone with it. He had not smoothed" long before he thought that he stone worked rather queerly, and was, in fact, too soft to grind the stone. balf, and then he found that he had picked up a nugget of pure gold.

Unfortunately, it was a rather small nugget. He sold it for $5.82 cents, and though this was a very good price for a pebble picked up in the street, it was not Waits Long for a Drink. On Laurel hill in Bridgeton, N. J., there stands a house between whose walls is hidden a quart bottle of the purest apple jack. The bottle has rested here for 39 years, and has, according to the old story told, eleven years more to stay. When the house was built, 39 years ago, a quart bottle was filled with 'jack" and tightly sealed and plastered in the wall by a man who had the house built. The bottle is not to be taken from its dark recess until the son of the man who placed it there for him becomes 50 years of age. The "boy" is now 39 years of age, and in all these years has kept true to the promise made in the days of his youth to his father not to touch the bottle of applejack until he reaches the half-century mark in life's journey.

Which Formed the Basis of One of the Incidents of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The incidents which formed the basis for the story of the escape of Eliza, the slave mother, with her child, across the Ohio river on the ice, which is familiar to readers of Mrs. Stowe's 'Uncle Tom's Cabin," were told by Rev. S. G. W. Rankin in Hartford recently. The incidents came within the ersonal knowledge of Mr. Rankin, sumption (Pulmonary Tuberculosis), and he said that he gave them to Mrs. Stowe and that she used a younger woman, who escaped at nearly the same time, to complete the picture and make it more attractive and dra-

As Mr. Rankin tells the story, his father's family, living on the bluffs on coveries to any afflicted reader of this the river, were well known as in the paper writing for them. business of helping runaway slaves, and slaves knew them as friends. It was one Christmas week that Eliza, a stalwart negro woman, came to the Rankin house in the night, having brought her husband across the river in a boat. He was covered with ice from the river, the night having been intensely cold, and the man, who was not as bright as Mrs. Stowe's George Harris by any means, had fallen into the water in getting out of the boat. Eliza was very religious and very determined, and had planned to send her join him with his children afterward. The husband was sent along and Eliza crossed the river to Kentucky that same night, returning to her mother. She fixed a date, two months ahead, when she would again come to the Rankin house. True to the arrangement, she crossed the river one night in February, when the river was in a treacherous condition, carrying her young child in a shawl strapped to her back. The ice was in broken floes, and she carried a board with a rope attached to it by which she passed from one cake to another. She got across and was sent to Canada to join her husband. She still had five children in slavery and said to the Rankins that she was going back to Kentucky after them the following June. On the June day in question she appeared in Mr. Rankin's garden, and she was disguised as a man and sent across the river, where she made her way to her former master's planta tion and hid beneath the current bushes in his garden. Here she wasdiscovered by her oldest daughter, a girl of 17, and at nightfall was hidden beneath the floor of her old cabin in the negro quarters. Sunday, after dinner, her master and his wife went several miles away to visit a friend, and Eliza, following the example of the Israelites when they despoiled the Egyptians, took blankets and household goods to the amount of about 200 pounds' weight, divided them into bundles for the five children, and started on an 11-mile walk to a point able to carry out any obligation made on the river which she was to reach at two o'clock Monday morning. She had been told to bring nothing but the children, but she had so overloaded them with the packages that the small er ones gave out, and she was obliged to carry one child a little way, a bundle nally, acting directly upon the blood and a little way, and then go back after mucous surfaces of the system. "That morning," said Mr. Rankin, when we expected to have Eliza and her children safe in Ohio, after the fog lifted, we saw 31 men on horseback, with dogs and guns, across the river, five children, after a reward of $1,300. Communication was opened with Efiza during the day and she was told what to do. At nightfall Mr. Rankin, disguised as a woman, with a party of young fellows, made a feint on the up the river, and gave the negro hunta lively chase, they suppose ing they had track of Eliza. The hunters were evaded, and at the same woman and children across to the Rankin house, where she remained in hiding for two weeks, being finally load of flour and bran. She escaped

Wires Attached to the Branches Destri

In France great care is taken in locating the wires that carry high-tension electric currents, whether used for light or for power, but in America the thing is done more simply. No one bothers himself about what is to be found at the side of the wire, and it passes among the branches of the trees and across thickets, unconscious of the damage that it may do. Now in many towns, says the Cosmos, it has been observed that the trees in the current dwindle and die. It has also been observed that the death of the trees invariably follows the rainy season; the leaves being then sonked with moisture, become good conductors, and lead the current gown into the tree from the wire. The wires, to be sure, have been insulated, but the protective layer has been quickly destroyed by the friction of the branches and the line becomes bare, producing thus results that it would have been well to avoid. And the electricity is the only thing that can be accused of this. pare the condition of the trees traversed by wires with that of neighboring trees. It has often been noticed that in a storm all the trees through which wires pass die in a few hours, while the surrounding ones are not touched. This is a very serious source of complaint, and causes some law-

Once when Pasteur was dining with his daughter and her family at her home in Burgundy he took care to dip in a glass of water the cherries that were served for dessert and then to wipe them carefully with his napkin before putting them in his mouth. His fastidjousness amused the people at table, but the scientist rebuked them for their levity and discoursed at length on the dangers in microbes and animaculae. A few minutes later, in a fit of abstraction, he suddenly seized the glass in which he had weahed the cherall at a single drought.
