System Broken Down and Hope Almost Abandoned—Health Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"For fifteen years I have suffered with catarrh and indigestion and my whole system was broken down. I had almost abandoned any hope of recovery. I purchased six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and its effects have been marvelous. It has made me feel like a new man. I am able to sleep well, have a good appetite, and I have gained several pounds in weight." JAMES WILDER, Oroville, Wash.

"I had a scrofula swelling on one side of my neck and ulcerated sores in my nostrils, caused by catarrh. I also had small, itching sores on my limbs. I bought three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and began taking it and the sores soon healed. My blood is purified, and the scrofula has disappeared." O. D. McMANUS, Mission, Washington.

LETTER FROM ALASKA.

Abe Jones, a former resident of Heppner, Gives a Heppner Friend Some Facts About Alaska and the Clondyke.

Abe Jones, who left Heppner last spring for Juneau, Alaska, and who has had an excellent opportunity of observing the situation with reference to the Clondyke strike, writes in answer to a letter from Dr. J. W. Baamus, in which he gives considerable information that will likely interest many who have been watching developments closely. Among other things of a personal nature Mr. Jones says:

Yours of 24th at hand today. Was a little surprised to hear from you. I will try to answer your questions the first thing.

The strike has not been exaggerated and only half told as yet. This is from personal acquaintances who have just come out for supplies and are going in again.

Juneau has about 2500 inhabitants. It is quite a winter camp and will be full and running over this winter, for a great many Yukoners cannot get over the summit and will have to winter in Juneau. Juneau is about one hundred miles from Dyea. Dyea is about thirty-two miles from the lakes at the head of the Yukon river, where you build or buy your boats. Living is a trifle more expensive here than in Tacoma, but can get good board for $1 per day. Board and room in the hotel about $8 per week. If you are going to the Clondyke, pack your grip with a change of clothes and come to Juneau for your outfit. You can buy what is necessary very much better and also cheaper than in Seattle or Portland, and will only get what is actually necessary.

The people below do not know what a Yukon outfit is, and it is comical to see some of the rigs that go through. Your best time would be to start about January and go down the river on the snow with sleds. Would not advise going in this winter, for there is very liable to be a shortage of provisions and that would mean trouble. By going down on the ice you would be just as well off as those that go after the last of August, and would have all your provisions on hand while there would be nearly eaten up. The winters are all that they are represented, it sometimes goes to 70 degrees below. The work is done before the thaw comes by lighting fires and thawing out the ground. You first go through the ice of the creeks and keep on down until you strike bedrock when you drift in, taking your dirt up to be washed after the thaw comes. The ground is frozen to bedrock and has to be all thawed out with fires. Dyea will most probably winter a great many Yukoners and has just been created a port of entry for Alaska.

Tell any of the boys that feel like coming out to start unless they have plenty of money to go through, and that the trip is hell.

If you come now you will have to pay from 25c to 30c per pound to pack your stuff over the mountain to the lake, but by going in the spring you can do it all yourself having plenty of time.

If I can give you any more information shall be pleased to do so.

With kindest regards to all the boys and yourself, Your friend, ABE JONES.

P. S.—There is no job about the trip being hard but everyone seems to get through. You can get through with about $250 from here but is rather too close figuring to suit me. Would have to do all your own packing and build your own boat. Boats cost about $100 at the lake.

JOAQUIN MILLER.

A Biographical Sketch of Oregon's Poet From the New York World.

Cincinnati Heine (Joaquin) Miller, the New York World's special correspondent to the Clondyke, has a world-wide reputation as poet and author. He was born in the Wabash district of Indiana, and before entering his teens accompanied his parents to Oregon. As a youth he was a miner in California, but abandoned mining in 1860 to study law. This did not prove to his liking, and the following year he was an express messenger in the gold mining districts in Idaho. Two years later he was editing the Democratic Register at Eugene, Ore. Having been admitted to the bar, he opened a law office in Canyon City, and in 1866 was elected judge of Grant county.

It was while filling the judgeship that he began his literary career and came to be known as Joaquin Miller, using that name deplume to his first two collections of published poems. He is alleged to have selected the signature because of his sympathy for Joaquin Murietta, a Mexican accused of brigandage, and in whose defense he published a paper. While touring in Europe in 1870 he published his first volume of unstated verse. The work was everywhere commended. Returning to America, he engaged in journalism in Washington, D. C., remaining there until 1887, when he returned to California, where he has since lived and earned the title of "The Poet of the Sierras." He is the author of several volumes of prose, including "The Danites," which was successfully dramatized. His best known poems are "Songs of the Sierras," "Songs of the Sonlands," "Songs of the Desert," "Songs of Italy," "Collected Poems," and "Songs of the Mexican Seas." The most popular, probably, of his many pieces of poetry are "The People's Song of Peace" and "On Rousseau's Isle."
