A STORY OF THE LE ROI.

How a Tailor Got $100,000 for a Suit Clothes-A Strange Story.

The rise in the Le Roi mining stock a Rossland, B. C., brings out a story in which Jake Yenzel, a German tailor the principal character.

He was suspicious of the sudden fortunes made by the pick and the pan of the prospector and preferred to slowly swell his bank account by sticking close to the needle and thread.

And yet by the application of this same needle and thread diligence Yenzel had this same bank account increased out of all proportion to his modest needs and his wildest ambitions.

One day gve years ago he sold a suit for $100,000. He didn't know it until recently, when a miner dorpped in the shop and happened to mention the rise is Le Roi mining stock from a par value of 1 cent to a par value of 800 cents.
