ARRESTED FOR MURDER.

After Kinding the Officers for Three Years, a Murderer Finds Himself in the Hands of the Law.

Yesterday Sheriff Matlock arrested a man who has been working on T. J. Allen's place, near Ione, and lodged him in jail in Heppner. The man under arrest gives his name as H. A. Brown, but his real name is supposed to be Gus Washline, whom the grand jury at Hillsboro, Washington county, indicted for murder about three years ago, but Washline succeeded in eluding the officers until yesterday when our efficient sheriff took him in and gave him quarters in the county jail. The charges against this young man are very serious. He is accused of murdering a man for his money in Washington county and after accomplishing this terrible deed, he is said to have buried the remains in a pile of manure and made his escape. Whether he has been in this section of the country all this time is not known, but he has been working on the Allen place several months. A few days ago a young man of Heppner, Tom Ingraham, happened to meet him and recognized him as the man charged with the crime. Ingraham reported the man to the authorities and he was subsequently arrested. The description of the man suits in every particular and Sheriff Matlock wired the sheriff at Hillsboro, who replied that he would be here at once to identify and take charge of the prisoner. The officer is expected to arrive tonight.

Washline, alias Brown, is about 25 years of age and is said to have served a short term in the penitentiary for larceny prior to the murder. A reward of $500 has been hanging over the head of the accused and it seems somewhat strange that he has not been captured ere this. If this man proves to be the guilty party, a conclusion as to the ultimate results of his trial may easily be imagined.

Devotion of a Male Partridge.

Having observed a natural history sketch to the effect that the cock partridge does not assist his mate in incubating the eggs, I wish to offer some evidence to the contrary, and to suggest that the case be reopened. In the early '80s, while laboring under the hallucination that a fair business man ought to make a good farmer, I was cutting sprouts in a new ground in south Mississippi, where I was farming, or imagining that I was farming. It was in the nesting season of the quail, and they were quite plentiful. Having a very sharp ax I was slashing about me promiscuously, and had delivered a blow at a cluster of sprouts, when out of the midst fluttered a cock quail with his neck nearly cut in two. I picked the bird up, and soon saw that my ax had nearly beheaded him. Upon inspecting the bushes I found a nest with a dozen eggs in it. These were still warm, and they were in the exact spot whence the cock had tumbled, bleeding and dying. Moreover, I was in a position to know that no other bird had been in the bush when I approached it. In view of the devotion of these birds to their young, I am strongly of the opinion that he deliberately remained on the nest in spite of my proximity, hoping to cover the eggs from observation, as well as to escape himself. Any true sportsman will appreciate the sorrow with which I contemplated the plucky little fellow who had died to protect his unborn young.—Cor. Baltimore Sun. Inaugurator of an Engineer.

A Chinese New Year's.

How the Day is Celebrated in a Chinese Quarter of San Francisco. Chinatown of San Francisco was keeping holiday, and all was gayety and bustle. The narrow, picturesque streets were decorated with brightly-colored lanterns, while overhead above the rooftops the yellow dragon-flags floated against a blue California sky. It was a sunny day in February, and the streets were thronged with a multitude of Chinese—men, women and children—all arrayed in their richest holiday attire. The children especially, with their bright faces and black eyes, and their pretty costumes, formed a most pleasing and interesting feature of this living oriental picture. Everybody seemed to be happy and good-natured; and ever and anon, as a group of friends met, they stopped and amid much ceremonious bowing exchanged the compliments of the season; for this festive occasion was nothing more nor less than the celebration of the Chinese New Year. The idea of celebrating New Year's day in February may strike some of my readers as odd. But, since this has been the Chinese custom from time immemorial, and is older, by several thousand years, than our acceptance of the 1st of January as the proper time, the Chinese, perhaps, are not far wrong in supposing themselves to be at least as much in the right as ourselves. This question, however, was of no concern to this merry holiday throng. They were quite satisfied with the arrangement; and, with the utmost belief in their own superiority, they felt at heart an inborn contempt—common to all Chinese—for "outside barbarians." This term embraces all nations not living within the sacred boundaries of "the flowery kingdom," and includes the inhabitants of all the world; and these unfortunate outsiders are broadly divided into two classes—eastern and western barbarians.—Theodore Worme, in St. Nicholas.

A Delicious Fruit Neat.

Select oranges with perfect skins, wipe them with a damp cloth and weigh them. Peel the fruit by taking the skin off in quarters and then cut it into strips. Cover the cut peel with hot water and let it cook 15 minutes. Drain off the water and again cover the peel with hot water and boil until the straws are tender. Meanwhile put into a preserving kettle the weight of the fruit in granulated sugar and squeeze over it the juice of the orange. Put the kettle over the back of the fire where the sugar will slowly dissolve. When the liquid boils put in the cooked straws and boil 25 minutes. Put the peel into jelly glasses and when it is cold cover.—Good Housekeeping.
