McClure's Magazine For 1897 GREAT SERIALS

A New Life of Grant by Hamlin Garland. The first authoritative and adequate Life of Grant ever published. (Begins in December.) Rudyard Kipling's first American serial, "Captains Courageous." (Begun in November.) Robert Louis Stevenson's "St. Ives." The only novel of Stevenson's still unpublished (Begins in May.)

Charles A. Dana. "Recollections of War Time." Mr. Dana was for three of the most critical years of the Civil War practically a member of Lincoln's Cabinet, and is probably better fitted than any other man living to give an authoritarive history of this period from his recollections and correspondence. Portraits of Great Americans. Many of them unpublished. In connection with this series of portraits it is intended to publish special biographical studies under the general title of MAKERS OF THE UNION from Washington to Lincoln.

Pictures of Palestine. Specially taken under the editor's direction. Stories of Adventure. A serial by CONAN DOYLE, in which he will use his extraordinary talent for mystery and ingenuity which have, in the "Sherlock Holmes" stories, given him a place beside Poe and Gaboriau.

TEN FAMOUS WRITERS

IAN MACLAREN. All the fiction that he will write during the coming year, with the exception of two contributions to another publication which were engaged from him long ago, will appear in McClure's Magazine.

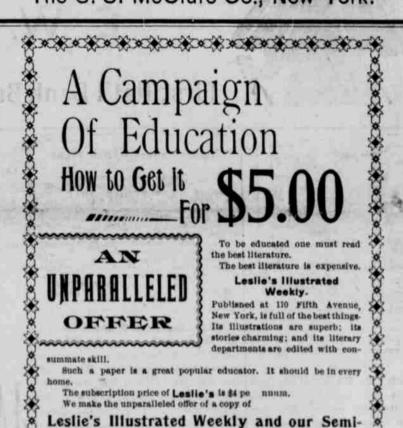

RUDYARD KIPLING. Besides "Captains Courageous." Kipling will contribute to McClure's all of the short stories he will write during the coming year. OCTAVE THANET is preparing for the MAGAZINE a series of short stories in which the sam characters will appear, although each will be complete in itself.

Anthony Hope Frank R. Stockton Bret Harte Stanley Weyman will all have stories in McClure's for the coming year.

C. C. C. today; 10, 52, 50 cents. Sold not taxed his strength too heavily. It is difficult to say at what period of life old age arrives. There are many causes that bring on precocious senility. Sometimes one man is very old at 30, and another presents all the attrib-utes of a second youth at 60. It is more logical to describe old age as that period in life during which a men dies naturally, if he does not succumb to a malady or an accident. Very few old men, as a matter of fact, die of disease, however strange this may appear. A great many the arteries, which become as solid and brittle as pipestems. Many deaths of old people are attributed to these causes, but we must not forget that they do not the arteries, which become as solid and suffice to explain all. Bichat came nearer the truth when he said that we die in detail, and continue to die until the day when we quit this earthly scene altogether.

Dr. Bloch shares the ideas of Bichat, and he cites statistics to prove that they are not wrong. He secured from M. Jacques Bertillon the Parisian record of the deaths from senility of both men and women during a period of 11 years, taking the age of 60 as the average, From these figures it appears that mor-tality among old people is greatest be-tween the ages of 80 and 85, while it diminishes suddenly from the 90th year. That is to say, the malady takes a lighter hold upon an old person who has reached that age and passed the critical period named above. In other words, an old person who reaches 90 without accident has a good chance of becoming a centenarian and dying of old age only. The deaths of old people in whom no disease can be discovered are always put down in statistics under the name of senile debility, senile exhaustion, senile cachexy, and senility. Now, the natural death through sensitity is not known, according to Dr. Bloch. It has sometimes been noticed among old people in the hospital of Sainte-Perine, but the eral months. anatomical examination in most cases monia. It is also variable according to localities, as can be proved by consulting the statistics of the departments of Frank J. Chenry. France. There are some regions where men live longer than they do in others. For instance, Youne and Gironde are particularly favored in this matter. How this is nobody can tell, but it is a fact duly observed .- N. Y. Sun.

COSTLY INSTRUMENTS.

Some of the Pieces for Band Use Are Very Expensive.

The writer was recently accorded the privilege of a peep into the museum attached to the factory of one of the largest firms of brass instrument makers in London. Here are to be seen types, fac-similes and models of every kind of musical instrument that the mind of man has ever devised, invented or produced, says a correspondent. In the corner is a duplicate of what is believed to be the most costly premade to the order of the late czar of Russia, and is of sterling silver, richly graven with various devices, among which the arms of the imperial house of Romanoff figure conspicuously. The whole of the ornamentation is of beaten gold filigree work, and the "bell" of the astrument is thickly incrusted with rubies and emeralds. Its net value is a trifle over 2,000 guineas. The private band of the Rao of Cutch cost originally £900, and renews most of the instruments every four or five years. The tigerakin used by the Rao's big drummer, which was sent over here to be prepared and mounted, was taken from an animal killed by his highness, and measured over seven feet in length It is lined throughout with heavy corded crimson silk, and the brute's eyes are simulated by a pair of big yellow dia-

Another very fine band was made three years ago to the order of the late shah of Persia. All the instruments were of pure silver-which, by the way, does not give forth so good a sound as brass, besides being far heavier to handle-inlaid with gold. The total of this band de luxe was a trifle under 3,000 guineas. A very different kind of band was that made last year, by the same firm, for the Mimkish Indians, a tribe of savages living near Alert bay. in British Columbia. The band is nearly all drum, and the mouthpieces of the brass instruments are tipped with India rubber, to obviate the inconvenience of applying metal to the lips in a tem- in Portland on Oct. 12. perature of some 30 or 40 degrees below

A curious order was received a short time ago from the emperor of Morocco. It was for 80 clarionets for one band. As the instruments in question were all in one key, it is probable that they were to be played in unison. The effect upon an average man of 80 band clarionets blown simultaneously would be to create in him a wild desire to take to the old stand on the Matlock corner, the woods and become an aborigine.
