THE FROZEN BREEZE.

A Strange Phenomenon Observed by a Lover of Nature.

Did you ever see a frozen breeze? You might have seen one if you had gone with me into the country one winter morning, says the Country.

This was the way it came to be frozen: All night long the air had been laden with mist. Over the fields, in the hollows, all through the woods, even on top of the hills, the fog hung heavily. All that time the wind blew steadily, but not fiercely, from some northern quarter.

At nightfall the mercury fell below the freezing point, so that this mist, as it drifted through the trees, was frozen upon their branches and twigs. The elms, the oaks and the other leafless trees took their ice coating quite evenly, but the thick, impenetrable masses of the needles of the pine trees were covered noticeably only upon the sides toward the north or northwest, from which the wind came. The strong, steady breeze bent the branches to leeward while it was icing them, and when the wind came down in the morning they remained just there, leaning to the southward, and frozen to immovability, but looking just as if the wind were still steadily blowing.

Even in the afternoon, when the rain began to fall and the wind came from quite another quarter, that north wind of the night before still remained white and frozen over the pine woods, the pale, rigid corpse of a thing once keenly alive.

HOW THE GREEKS SLEEP.

Fastidious People Find No Conveniences at the Hotels.

In Greece the hotels of the interior follow one general type—the Italian. There is no common sitting-room, says the Atlantic Monthly. Why should there be? There is no office, but that does not seem to interfere with the presentation of bills. The ground floor is given up to a cafe or restaurant, if the innkeeper goes into that kind of business. Very often, however, the master of the Apollo has only rooms to let. The sleeping apartments on the floor above are often approached by an outside stairway, and, as is to be expected in a southern clime, they are scantily furnished. Overfurnishing is a vice anywhere. Under a southern sky it is a crime of which the Greeks are not guilty.

There is usually a mirror, though that tribute to human vanity is sometimes lacking, and, like the Turk, the solitary Turkish towel bears no brother near his throne. The bedstead is invariably of iron. As in primitive United States within my memory, single rooms are rare. Two, three, four, five beds are put in one room or strung along the corridors. A fastidious person who desires to occupy a room alone has to pay for all the beds therein. In some places special charges are made for sleeping in the daytime, and there is a fixed rate for sleeping on the floor.

OLEOMARGARINE.

Former Disposition of the Fat Scrapings from Fur.

Here is an echo from the days when it was not reckoned unlawful to sell oleomargarine as butter:

"We no longer have the same profitable way of disposing of our waste products that we had a few years ago," said a fur dealer the other day. He looked retrospective and a trifle regretful, as he continued: "There was always a ready market then for every particle of the fat scrapings from the different skins. Who took them? Why, the oleomargarine manufacturers, to be sure. They would send wagons up to my place every day and carry away several barrels of the fat and grease which have to be taken off the under side of the heavy pelts. Skunks, opossums, all kinds of animals contributed. It all went into the butter. But that is over with now. Since this new law has been in operation, that branch of business has been dead. People could eat skunk and opossum grease, you know, so long as it was called butter, but if the dealers are obliged to come out frankly with a description of its real character, their customers object."

No man or woman can enjoy life or accomplish much in this world while suffering from a torpid liver. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It soothes, strengthens and heals. It is the great cure. For sale by Conner & Brook.

Sam Lefler, of Clark's canyon, showed one of the force a sample of peaches grown on bunchgrass without irrigation, while in town yesterday. They were of splendid flavor and quite large. Mr. Lefler has a young orchard but it bore enough this season for home use.

Sunday Diversions.

On last Sunday, down at the bowling alley, Geo. Vinson and Walter Van Dux got into a "scrap" which was pretty lively for awhile. Geo. employed his teeth to a good advantage and thus got the best of the scrimmage. However, later in the day, Charley Van Dux, Walter's brother, bobbed up serenely and took up the latter's fight. In this Geo. only lasted one round. Yesterday Marshal Heger started out to gather in the boys but Vinson was missing. This morning the Van Dux boys paid each $7.50, which is the usual fee for such fun. The trouble arose over something concerning a game at the bowling alley.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c and $1 per bottle at Conner & Brook's drug store.

Frank McFarland has been appointed special agent of The Equitable Life Assurance Co., of New York, the strongest in the world. Cash surplus to policy holders of over $4 million dollars. Don't take insurance without seeing the new plans of the Equitable. Insure both sexes at same rates. 774

Elmer Willis had the fingers on his right hand badly bruised at the bowling alley, while setting up pins in a "cooked hat" game, on last Saturday.

The Cruel Knife!

The alarming increase in the number of deaths which occur as the result of a surgical operation is attracting general attention, and a strong sentiment against such methods of treatment is fast developing among the most intelligent classes. It seems that in almost every case for which the doctors' treatment is unsuccessful, the learned physicians decide at once that an operation must be performed, and the keen blade of the surgeon is recklessly resorted to. Doctors are human, and of course are liable to make mistakes, but their mistakes are too fatal to be indulged in promiscuously, and as so many lives are sacrificed in this manner, it is but natural for the public to believe that half the operations are unnecessary, besides being a fearful risk to human life, even if successful.

It is a positive fact, however, that all operations are not necessary, and that a majority of them are absolutely undertaken without the slightest chance of success. The doctors have never been able to cure a blood disease, and a surgical operation is their only method of treating deep-seated cases, such as cancer and scrofulous affections. Aside from the great danger, an operation never did and never will cure cancer, as the disease never fails to return. Cancer is in the blood, and common sense teaches anyone that no disease can be cut from the blood.

Here is a case where the pain inflicted on a six-year-old boy was especially cruel, and after undergoing the tortures produced by the surgeon's knife he rapidly grew worse. Mr. J. N. Murdoch, the father of the boy, residing at 279 Snodgrass street, Dallas, Texas, writes: "When my son, Will, was six years old, a small sore appeared on his lip, which did not yield to the usual treatment, but before long began to grow. It gave him a great deal of pain, and continued to spread. He was treated by several good doctors, who said he had cancer, and advised that an operation was necessary. After much reluctance, we consented, and they cut down to the jaw bone, which they scraped. The operation was a severe one, but I thought it was the only hope for my boy. Before a great while the cancer returned, and began to grow rapidly. We gave him many remedies without relief, and finally upon the advice of a friend, decided to try S.S.S. (Swift's Specific), and with the second bottle he began to improve. After twenty bottles had been taken, the cancer disappeared entirely and he was cured. The cure was a permanent one, for he is now seventeen years old, and has never had a sign of the dreadful disease to return."

S.S.S. is far ahead of all other blood remedies, because it is the only one which cures deep-seated obstinate blood diseases such as Cancer, Scrofula, Eczema, Catarrh, Rheumatism, etc. It is the only blood remedy guaranteed
