By reference to another column of the Gazette it will be seen that the subscription price of the paper has been reduced to $2 00 per year, the Gazette. subscription strictly in advance. This reduction is made possible from the fact that our subscription list has largely increased on the cash basis at the old rate and we believe that our patrons should now get the benefit of a reduction. And not only this, but we believe extend our subscription list, thereby giving the Gazette great prestige as an advertising medium, which will more than compensate us for what little we lose in the price of the paper per year.

CRANKY INVENTORS.

Some of the Queer Productions Sent to the Patent Office.

Visionary Geniuses Who Imagine Their Complicated Devices Are Going to Become the Wonder of the Civilized World.

There are queer people in this world. Among the queerest are some of the inventors who flood the patent office with their severely queer designs. "Yes," said an official recently, "we see multitudes of 'cranks' at this building, and our chief amusement is to read the specifications of ambitious a grant of patent. There is the airship 'crank,' with a quiet notion in his head that he is to be some day a publie benefactor, but who really knows as much about aerostation as a jackrabbit. Next to him in oddities of thought is the fire-escape dreamer, with his ladders, pulleys and cables.' Upon investigation in the record room I discovered drawings of the latest patents piled on a low shelf. Upon perusal the first device of a peculiar nature was discovered. The invention in question was an improved method of exterminating mosquitoes, for which a Texan was given letters patent. The winged messengers of bliss probably made themselves obnoxious to the patentee and he determined to anninilate the whole species. His invention is a queer and complicated intermixture of screens, gauze and whirring mechanism, into which the little buzz ing songsters are drawn and effectually annihilated. Another inventive genius from the west solicited a patent for a fruitpicker. This instrument is a very modest-looking affair, resembling somewhat one-half of a pair of shears A small ring fits over the fore-finger of the operator, and brings at right angles a cutting edge or blade. The fruit to grasping the stem in a certain manner with the right hand and giving a quick twist either the aforesaid fruit or the thumb will be severed. The inventor in this case seemed to overlook the fact that the greatest varieties of American fruits do not grow on bushes or within reach of the hand, and last, but not least, the welfare of the person handling his useful little implement has to be respected.

A little way down in the file is a peculiar looking machine, patented by a Michigander and used by said gentleman in lifting pans from stoves. The apparatus embodies such a complicated mass of levers, screws and other similar devices of mechanism that it is safe to say his panlifter will never find popular favor in the American kitchen.

For the past six months a car-coupling epidemic has opread itself and permeated every state in the union. The epidemic is a mania for all classes to invent car-couplers and get patent grants therefor. The larger portion of these couplers are so complicated and useless that the anxious patentees will never receive an iota of good from their inventions. A certain individual from the Empire state named Collins applied for a was tested and an explosion followed. The lamp and application went to pieces together. But the queerest of queer departures in this enlightened age is that taken by an eccentric resident of Ohio, who in vented an equally eccentric boat on eccentric ideas. The boat was to be so constructed as to roll over the waters in the fashion of a low or wheel, This strange craft was to be propelled by the wind striking on suitable blades standing out from the radii of the hull. The Ohioan failed to and the examiners sent his application | their race.

higher than a balloon. Then comes along a certain man named Knox, a bona fide citizen of a southern state, who has not apparently profited by the example of the American who tried to eatch sunshine some years ago. This modern mortal has constructed a conundrum which he alleges will effectually capture the heat from old Sol, and retain the same for later use. This philosophical wonder is in the hands of the originator's attorney, and has not as yet made its appearance in the interior department, where it will be practically tested, and then, in all probability, it will find a deep grave under the department foundations. Another late application is that of James Geary, who claims he can capture and store atmospheric electricity during a thunder storm for home consumption.

A TEXAS WONDER.

An Important Discovery Recently Made in Wise County.

Prehistoric Pavement of Petrified Wood Supposed to Have Been Constructed by Mound Builders of an Extinct Race.

A discovery of probably great archeological value, as regards the pre historic people of the United States, was recently made on the farm of H. Richwalls, twenty-five miles southwest of Decatur, in Wise county, Tex. It consists of a pavement of petrified wood covering the summit of a mound one and a half acres in area. Samples of the pavement were brought to the Dallas News by D. M. Garvin, of Cleveand, O., who made the following statement regarding the discovery: The mound is sixty feet high, squareshaped and with sloping sides. It was ooked upon as an ordinary clay structure until a short time ago, when, in digging the soil on the summit, which is level and measures an acre and a half, a petrified pavement was struck under what appeared to be a shallow deposit of drift. Further explorations showed that the entire summit of the mound was paved. The petrified blocks were laid on ends as compactly as a Nicholson pavement. In places the pavement is perfectly smooth, while in ther places, owing to the depression that the soil has undergone during the ages, it is irregular. The mound which was constructed with mathematcal precision, also contains some blocks of stone that seem to have been used in a building." The samples of the pavement are four inches long, and andoubtedly are petrified wood. Three inches of their length is silica and the remaining inch, measuring to the wearing surface, is carbonate of lime. This combination, which is not uncommon in petrifications, shows that the pavement was probably set in silicious sand and that the upper part was subjected to the action of water containng lime in solution. The blocks give evidence of having been split by a sharp instrument and sawed at the upper surface. While thousands of mounds have been discovered on this continent this is the only one in which, through the agency of petrification, nature has embalmed an evidence of a place in civilization occupied by the mound builders far in advance of what had been accorded them by anti-

That this mysterious race practiced the arts of agriculture is proved by the fact that mounds are so close together n some districts as to have rendered it impossible for their occupants to have subsisted by fishing and hunting; and that those inhabitants engaged in mining and commerce is proved by the disovery in Peruvian mounds of Lake Superior copper. But although copper chisels, rimmers and indented knives that might have been used as saws) have been found in mounds, there never was any proof that the mound builders were wood workers until this discovery in Wise county. Wood being an article that time destroys, all its evidences of the home life of the mound builders must necessarily have long since been obliterated, except where preserved by the agency of petrification. While this agency in the Wise county mound has only preserved a beautiful pavement, it may be inferred that a people sufficiently advanced to execute a work that in recent years has immortalized Nicholson in the annals of street engineering were capable of raising handsome wooden temples and other structures. That they were not of the same race as the Indi ans appears from the fact that the latter have no tradition concerning the origin of mounds, and were they the original mound builders, though their civilization subsequently perished, they could not have lost track of such an important part of the history of Certain it is now that the mound builders who once thickly inhabited this country were agriculturists, mechanics and traders, but to find whence came they and whither they went one gropes in the darkness of the past. Did their occupation extend back to that period between the dawn of man's creation and the Noachan deluge? Remains of man have been found in this country that point to antediluvian antiquity. A piece of basket matting was found in an island in Vermillion bay Louisiana, below the remains of an elephant; the remains of a mastodon, partly wasted, were found in Missouri, and in excavating for gas works n New Orleans a human skeleton was found below the remains of four cypress forests, the accumulation, in the opinion of scientists, requiring fourteen thousand years to form. The geological age in which the pavement on the mound in Wise county petrified is a live subject of inquiry and doubtless will be disputed. Was it during the period in which a great chain of lakes extended from the Gulf of Mexico northward, or when was it? It was Horace Greeley who undertook to write up a mound for his paper, but after all he could tell about it was contained in the words: "It is here." He and not seen the Wise county mound.

HE REFUTED THE LIE. Turned Over Only Five Times After He

Jumped. Bill Haw was an awkward, ungainly young man, whose life was spent on a Kansas farm, says the New York World. He lived near the little station of Hacknear-by town on the train. It dashed up toward the platform at a high rate of speed. The engineer tried to apply the air-brakes to stop the train, but they refused to work. He whistled for the hand brakes and the brakemen and the conductor began twisting them as if their lives depended upon stopping the Bill saw that something was the matter and concluded that he was the cause of it. The train was past the station. and he feared he would be taken past his home. Standing on the lower platform he gave a wild leap off the train.

In describing Bill's descent afterward the postmaster at Hackney, who had seen Bill's flight through the air, said: "I thought some one had thrown a saddle off the train. Bill rolled off all in a bunch. When the dust settled down Bill emerged from the confusion with his clothes nearly torn off him his face and hands skinned and an appearance of terror on his face. He actually turned over eight times after he jumped before he stopped."

"That is a lie!" exclaimed Bill, who had listened to the narration, "I never turned over eight times. I turned over five times. I reckon I ought to know. I counted 'em."

THE LATEST FAD.

Autograph Hats Now the Rage with College Students and Summer Girls. One of the new fads that started with he Cornell university boys is the fashion of wearing autograph hats. One sees them everywhere, for college men in other colleges have taken it up, and have scattered themselves here and there among the summer girls. The hats are made of white canvas, with stitched brims. Names can be written in ink anywhere on the surface. One of these had several names of wellknown men written upon it, among them the man who pulled stroke for the Cornell eight that won such a glorious victory over Pennsylvania, Harvard and Columbia in that memorable boat race at Poughkeepsie.

Sentimental young men collect the names of their sweethearts, though this has its drawbacks, because there is always the chance that the last girl will want to know all about the other girls whose names she finds written on the hat before hers. The words are usually printed, though script makes a prettier hat and looks less like an advertising device. To see stalwart young college men stalking along with these hats on gives one the impression of one of those impecunious individuals who march up and down upon the business streets with a printed placard on their backs to the effect that "a regular dinner can be had at the Blank dairy lunch for 20 cents."

However, the fad is growing, and by fall the white hats will be black
