A "QUID" OF TOBACCO. How a Small Thing Stopped Operati

Lieut. Emile Duboc tells an amusing story of an event, which, he says, certainly led to the downfall of hydraulic machinery in the French service. A few years ago the authorities of a great shipbuilding firm were very much perturbed when the trials for turning the turrets of a new battle ship, in the presence of the committee appointed to take over the ship, were failures. A day or two before everything had gone satisfactorily. But now the turret, after some slight movements, stuck fast. The gauges indicated the normal pressure; there was nothing wrong with the turret or with the racks for rotatpossible to assign any reason for the behavior of the turret that the committee had to go home without seeing it revolve. That evening and the following day a complete overhaul was made of the system of piping, and it was then discovered that one small but important pipe was completely choked by a "quid" of chewed tobacco, which a workman had doubtless let fall into it moved the turret worked as well as ever, but the disquietude caused by the want of success of the day before was only increased when it was discovered how insignificant the cause had been. From that day the naval authorities decided that in future wherever practic-

'Motion granted," said the judge, "No more dastardly outrage was ever perpetrated," began the lawyer, "than the incarceration of this, my innocent client. He was engaged in the pursuit of his daily vocation, when the strong arm of the law descended upon him.

He-"Madam," said the judge, "have I not already told you that your motion was that they are a miracle worker. Every granted? The prisoner is discharged." Queer Ideas of the Trades People o

Scotland. The last time the significance of that very versatile and comprehensive word "gentleman" came up for discussion in the present writer's hearing one of the talkers was reminded of the amusing experiences of an American woman in Scotland, says Harper's Weekly. She had been studying to be a trained nurse and went abroad in the summer. In Edinburgh she undertook to buy a mackintosh. She found one that suited her, but the price was too high. She said to the shop girl: "I have to work for my living and can't afford to pay so much. You must sell it to me cheaper." "Vait a minute," said the girl, and went to the rear of the shop to the proprietor and said: "That person would like that cloak, but she says she's not a lady, and wants a reduc-tion." Whether she got the cloak or not did not appear, but unquestionably she got a very surprising illustration of the difference between the meaning of the word "lady" in Scotland and its meaning in the United States.
